TUTT'S PILLS
TORPID BOWELS, DISORDERED LIVER, and MALARIA.
From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having selected some dirty, Disinclination to eat, Fluctuating at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine, TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through the skin, "scavengers of the system," promoting appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect ANTIDOTE TO MALARIA.
Sold everywhere. Office 41 Murray Street, N.Y.

SAVED BY A SECOND. ON THE BRINK OF ETERNITY.

How One of Lincoln's Reprieves Was Delayed by a Break in the Wires.

"The most impressive sight I ever saw, I think, was at Harper's Ferry in '65," said Detective C. W. McElroy yesterday afternoon. The detective is a member of Perkins' Agency, and was at one time Sheriff of Oswego County, N. Y. The conversation was brought about by a remark upon the impressiveness of the funeral services over General Grant.

"The sight of a man going to his own funeral, with the band playing a dead march, is calculated to impress one," he continued. "That is the case, you know, with a man condemned to death by court-martial. The case of which I spoke happened in January, 1865, and the wonderful escape of the condemned parties is something I shall never forget. Two Irishmen, John Shea and Michael Doane, had been sentenced to be shot for desertion. There was considerable feeling in favor of the men. It was in the time of big bounties, and the two young men had enlisted for something like $1,000 apiece. In a few days they were both missing, and were not caught for three or four weeks. They were drunk, and their money was about gone. The truth of the matter was that it was no case of willful desertion. The men had got on a drunk, and had never sobered up enough to realize their position. They were badly frightened, and were attended by two priests. I can remember the place well. They were marched up on a little hill on a level plateau, and the soldiers thrown into three sides of a hollow square. The two men, accompanied by their priests, and preceded by the band playing the dead march, were marched around the inside of this square and stood nearly in the center, by the side of their open coffins. The priests were in earnest conversation with them, and the minutes rolled by till they grew into an hour. Twelve o'clock came, and General Stevenson gave orders for the priests to leave the men. Very reluctantly they did so, prolonging their leave-taking upon one pretext and another as long as they could. Everything was at last made ready and it was only a matter of seconds between the men and eternity, when the General's orderly rode up, swinging his hat and yelling at the top of his voice. It was a reprieve from Lincoln.

"It seems that the priests had telegraphed the President the night before, asking for a reprieve, and stating that there were mitigating circumstances. Lincoln, who was always looking for an excuse to save a man's life, reprieved them. General Stevenson's head-quarters were nearly a mile from where we were, and the telegraph office was at his headquarters. He had left a mounted orderly there with instruction to rush through any dispatch that came. Nothing came until a few minutes before 12, and the orderly dashed away. He had to go up a steep hill, nearly half a mile long. When he reached the top his horse was badly winded, and could hardly go. He met a citizen on a good horse, and without any ceremony pulled the gentleman down and mounted the fresh animal. Half a minute's delay would have been the last of Messrs. Doane and Shea.

"A strange part of the story is yet to come. Some three years afterward I met an old telegraph operator in Oswego. He was in Washington in the winter of '64 and '65. We got to talking over war matters, and I found that he remembered the case I have told you about. He was in charge of the wire leading to Harper's Ferry. He had heard of the two men to be executed there, though the operator. They had discussed the matter over the wires. Consequently he remembered the case well. Upon the morning of the execution, at 10 o'clock, the dispatch reprieving the men was handed him to send out. He turned to his desk, and what was his horror to find that he couldn't work the wire. A storm was in progress, or something else was the matter. At any rate the wire would not work. There was no other way of reaching Harper's Ferry. The dispatch he didn't get off until just before 12, but, as it happened, in good time; but he told me it was an experience he would never forget. Altogether, it was a pretty close shave for the two Irishmen, and I don't believe they ever forgot the accident either."—[Pittsburg Dispatch.]

Personalities.

THE GOOD QUEEN OF ITALY.
An Italian correspondent of the Times says:—
It would be shameful ingratitude if we were not proud and fond of our king and queen, and of the whole House of Savoy that has done so much for Italy. No one appeals in vain to the queen's kind heart; she sends the way of helping and comforting every one. While driving out one day and as she was returning to the palace, she was suddenly surprised by a man tossing a small child into her carriage. She immediately took the crying child—a little ragged baby of about two and a half or three years old—on her knees, patted and kissed it, and insisted on taking it to the palace with her. The child held a petition in its hands, from its father, who had been a soldier, but, having recently been sick, was now seeking employment, and in great poverty. That same evening the child was sent back to its home with a message of help from the queen to the poor man.

JULES FERRY AND THE ORGAN OF NOTRE DAME.
The Paris correspondent of the New York World says:—
Jules Ferry came back to Paris a few days ago. He was to remain away for two years, but Paris seems to have attractions for him that he cannot resist. The wags of the cafes say that after his arrival in Paris he went to mass to Notre Dame to hear the organ play. It is known that the former Prime Minister has a passion for listening to the great organ of Notre Dame, and the story is told that on one occasion, after leaving the church, he whispered in the ear of a friend, in a voice of gloomy foreboding: "That organ will bring me to believe in God yet, if I don't quit going to listen to it."

THE PRESIDENT AND THE KENTUCKY GIRL.
A Washington correspondent tells this one:—
A Kentucky Congressman's pretty daughter visited Washington recently. She went up to President Cleveland upon the occasion of a White House reception and said: "I'll bet a horse you don't know who I am."
The President was equal to the occasion.
"No," said he, "I don't know who you are, but I'll bet a horse you are from Kentucky."
"Shake," said the young lady and she has been on good terms with the President ever since.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES' CHEAP LECTURE.
Several famous writers and orators of Boston were speaking of their lecture experience, when the subject of pay was brought up. Each was certain he had received the smallest sum. But Dr. Holmes made a climax by saying: "Listen, gentlemen, I had engaged to give a lecture for $5. After it was over a grave-looking deacon came to me and said: 'Mr. Holmes, we agreed to give you $5, but your talk wasn't just what we expected, and I guess ten-fifty will do.'"

Ingersoll Differs with Miss Cleveland.
"If Miss Cleveland condemns the poetry of George Eliot," says Ingersoll, "she has made a mistake. There is no poem in our language more beautiful than 'The Lovers,' and none loftier or purer than 'The Choir Invisible.' There is no poetry in the 'beyond.' The poetry is here—in the grand, the poetry of the 'beyond' is too far away—a little too general. Shelley's 'Sky Lark' was in our sky—the 'Daisy' of Burns grew on our ground; and between that lark and that daisy is room for all the real poetry of the earth."

What will Surely Do It.
One's hair begins to fall out from many causes. The important question is: What is sure to make it grow again? According to the testimony of thousands, Parkers Hair Balm will do it. It quickly covers bald spots, restores the original color when the hair is gray or faded, eradicates dandruff, and causes the scalp to feel cool and well. It is not a dye, not greasy, highly perfumed, safe. Never disappoints those who require a nice, reliable dressing.

It Does not Follow that because a man has invested in "wild cat" stock he will make a fair profit—because on his investment. We would add another clause—he often has hard scratching to keep even.—[Stockton Maverick.]

An Internal Revolution
Which enables the stomach to throw off the yoke of dyspepsia, is effected through the aid of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a most efficient ally in warring with all disorders which affect the digestive organs, the liver and the bowels. When the dyspeptic experiences heartburn, wind on the stomach, or any of the other familiar symptoms of his malady, a wineglass full of this matchless stomachic will dissipate them, and a persistence of the remedy bring about a cure. Constipation and biliousness, evils to the relief of which aperients and cathartics are inadequate, also yield to this safe alternative. The restoration of appetite and nightly repose, and the disappearance of those nervous symptoms that habitually annoy the chronic sufferer from dyspepsia, also ensue upon the use of the Bitters, which is likewise a standard remedy and preventative of fever and ague, rheumatism, kidney and bladder troubles, and debility.

Hunting Water with a Baboon.

If upon a long hunt or journey the Kafir be unable for a long time to find water, he sometimes avails himself of the instinct of one of those animals which he frequently keeps in a domesticated state—the baboon, or chacma. The baboon takes the lead of the party, being attached to a long rope, and allowed to run about as it likes. When it comes to a root of babiana it is held back until the precious vegetable can be taken entire out of the ground, but in order to stimulate the animal to further exertions it is allowed to eat a root now and then. The search for water is conducted in a similar manner. The wretched baboon is intentionally kept without drink until it is half mad with thirst and is then led by a cord as before mentioned. By what signs the animal is guided no one can even conjecture, but if water is in the neighborhood the baboon is sure to find it.—[American Field.]

How She "Reformed" Him.
"Does your husband go to the lodge, Mrs. Gibberick?"
"Well, he just don't. I broke up that little game quite a while ago."
"Why, how in the world did you do it?"
"Whenever he started for the lodge I went with him as far as the skating rink, and told him to call for me on his way home. It only took a few doses to cure him."

Recent experiments show that if bags containing oil are thrown from a ship in a storm, the force of the waves is lessened. In the same way St. Jacobs Oil checks the wave of rheumatism and brings peace where all was turmoil.
