JOHN HAHN,

"A SOBRIETY BALL."

MAKING THE DRUNK SOBER.

One of the Purposes Subscribed by Druggists in the Early Morning Hours

The chimes were ringing four o'clock in the early gray morn as the reporter, belated, entered a drug-store on Broadway. The sallow night-clerk was giving change to a well-dressed but very tired young man, who evinced a strong desire to lie down on the marble floor and take a nap. The change pocketed with some difficulty, the young man tucked deviously through the door into the dark street beyond. The night clerk muttered: "Another bromide and aromatic." "What's that?" "A man who wants to sober up before he reaches home. Do we have many of our? Well, I should smile. They're our best trade from 2 to 5 A. M. And there's a funny thing about it. Regular drunkards are better customers than occasional. Of the former, two-thirds try to sober up with drugs before confronting an irate wife or mother; of the latter, only a third go to an apothecary. Almost all have a limited knowledge of what they want, but let us determine the quantity to be given. The favorite potion is bromide of potash and aromatic ammonia. Another is bromide and valerian. Old toppers and opium-eaters want laudanum or morphine in theirs.

"Another class come in perfectly sober, but desire something to disinflect their breath or disguise it. The former take soda with coffee-cream sirup, and the latter aromatic herbs or strong-flavored confectionery. Why, for these fellows we have a special kind of candy. They are what is known as Imperials, and they are flavored with clove, cinnamon, wintergreen, sassafras and other equally pungent oils. The oddest customer I have is a chemist, who has a weekly club meeting. They must be German beer-drinkers, for when he comes in it's just like a brewer. He is very systematic, and takes first what he calls his 'sobriety ball.' That's bromide, aromatic ammonia and laudanum. He talks ten or fifteen minutes, to give his stomach time to absorb the dose, and then takes his 'disinfector,' which is coffee-cream soda with two drops of carbolic acid. He next departs an ounce of Imperials and returns home. By the time he arrives, he says, he is all braced up and has a breeze like a new-born babe eating its first candy stick. I tell him he'll kill himself with the treatment, but he only answers, 'Death before the tears of a lovely woman,' and keeps on. He told me his wife was a T. A. B., but that she had never tumbled to his little scheme in five years.

JOHN HAHN,

The Strange Parasites Which Fatten on the Flanks of Man-Eaters.

One vicious, expressionless eye, saw a writer in the New York Post, was cast slightly upward, and as the shark moved slowly along his entire form was visible. About the head swam several of the famous pilot fish (naucrates). They were continually darting at objects on the surface of the water; then running nimbly after their great friend, as if to tell the news, and taking up their position by the side of the shark. The skipper had baited the hook with a twelve-pound grouper, and making it fast to a piece of wood that would allow the bait to drop ten feet from the surface, tossed it over. The shark had disappeared, but in ten minutes he was seen swimming towards the smack again, and finally ran foul of the bait, and I distinctly saw him take it. There was no turning on the back; he seemed to sink below it, and took it without turning in the slightest, and moved off with the same measured swing.

The skipper slacked out the line gradually until about thirty feet had gone; then taking a brace against the rail, allowed it to come taut, and jerked the hook into the thief. Luckily he dropped the line, as the jerk that came in response to his would have started an ox, and the line went hissing over the rail so fast that it could not be followed by the eye. "Let him have all he wants," said the skipper; "the more line, the quicker I'll down him."

Then ensued a struggle that would have made some of the hand-liners of the northern fishing banks open their eyes. When the line (or rope) had gone out nearly two-thirds of its length the fisherman skillfully caught it with a belaying pin, and so gradually reduced the speed of the fish. Finally, throwing off the pin, he seized the line in his hands and ran forward, then aft, taking in the slack so gained. Then the shark would go straight away, taking him to the rail, and the belaying pin would be adopted again as a soother. Four or five such rushes as this evidently had a very decided effect on the great fish.

The Mosquito Not Made in Vain.

A lady whom I know, and who resides about twelve miles from the city, has two children, whose blood was, up to a few weeks ago, in a very bad condition. Various medicines were tried, with no effect, but singularly to relate, the children were, soon after arriving at their summer home, literally covered with mosquito bites, while the parents were scarcely troubled by them. In a week or so they began to mend, and in less than six weeks they grew fat and healthy, and as they thrived the mosquitoes became less troublesome. To-day they are as fat and healthy as any children of the same age, and the marvelous change is ascribed to the beneficial influences of the New Jersey pest. "Man About Town," in New York Star.

An Internal Revolution

Which enables the stomach to throw off the yoke of dyspepsia, is effected through the aid of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a most efficient ally in warring with all disorders which affect the digestive organs, the liver and the bowels. When the dyspeptic experiences heartburn, wind on the stomach, or any of the other familiar symptoms of his malady, a wineglass full of this marvellous stomachic will dissipate them, and a persistence of the remedy bring about a cure. Constipation and biliousness, evils to the relief of which aperients and cathartics are inadequate, also yield to this fine alternative. The restoration of appetite and nightly repose, and the disappearance of those nervous symptoms that habitually annoy the chronic sufferer from dyspepsia, also ensue upon the use of the Bitters, which is likewise a standard remedy and preventative of fever and ague, rheumatism, kidney and bladder troubles, and debility.

—Will you suffer with Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint? Shiloh's Vitalizer is guaranteed to cure you. Sold by W. E. Dement.

He Was No Goose.

Mrs. Maroney, of Middle Alton, kept geese. It so happened that when a setting was within a few days of being "fit to pick," the goose which was covering the eggs became sick and died. No female bird could be induced to remain upon the eggs, and the good old lady who owned the fowl abandoned all hope of securing the "clutch." A gander, which seemed to realize the situation fully, and who labored hard to induce some of the other birds to complete the job, finally undertook the job himself. Mrs. Maroney could hardly believe her senses, and was ten times more surprised with the freak than was Balaam when the ass spoke unto him, as narrated in the Bible. The neighbors were called in, and a public discussion held within earshot of the gander, who appeared wholly unconcerned and determined to hold his base until his progeny came peeping forth, no matter what people might say. And he did, too; within a few days the required time was completed, and Mrs. Maroney—thanks to her gander—had as fine a "clutch" of goslings as ever went swimming in Horseshoe Pond. —[Alton Sentinel.
