HOW THE HAIR IS CUT.
Parting with Their Hair—Female Craze for Short Hair.
The craze among the ladies for wearing the hair short is becoming general, and is spreading all the country over. It has already become very popular in Rochester, and now the most stylish young ladies in the city are parting with their raven and golden tresses. There was a time when it was considered somewhat "fast" for a lady to wear her hair short, but since Miss Cleveland, the President's sister, the present mistress of the White House, and, by common consent, the "first lady in the land," wears her locks shorn quite short and advocates the custom on the grounds of comfort, convenience, and health, it has become the style. Time was, too, when a short-haired lady was so rare that her appearance in public places attracted general attention. But that was a good while ago. The prominent hair-cutters are becoming quite proficient in cutting the hair of their rapidly increasing lady patrons. Some interesting and strange scenes are now seen in the city hairdressers' establishments and barber shops.

"A handsome young lady, just from boarding school, came into my shop on Tuesday and said she wanted her hair cut just like Miss Cleveland's," said a prominent barber. "She had a picture of the President's sister for me to look at; and with the suggestions given by her companion, who had seen Miss Cleveland, and with the aid of the photograph, I cut and trimmed her hair to her complete satisfaction. Oh, I don't know who or what started the style. Perhaps Miss Cleveland had something to do with it, but I am inclined to believe that Miss Maude Granger, Miss Dora Wiley, and other actresses and singers who are great favorites with women, started the style here. Of course it helps our business, but leaving all selfish reasons aside, is it not the most reasonable craze that has recently come into style? Why, you have no idea what a constant trouble a heavy head of hair is to a woman. It has to be dressed two or three times a day, and this takes up a great deal of a woman's time. With long and heavy hair, it is difficult for a lady to keep her scalp clean and healthy."

"What do the ladies do with their short tresses?"
"They take them away with them. Some of them bring old corset boxes for this purpose, and when no box of this shape is handy I do up the hair in a paper."
"Do they sell it?"
"I don't know. I don't believe many of my customers have, for they have invariably exhibited more of a fondness for the hair than they would for the money they derive from the sale of it. No, I think they take it home and keep it. When it becomes stylish to wear the hair long again they will have switches made of it."
"Yes, we have some queer scenes in our shops now," continued the hair cutter.
"A young lady who comes to have her locks cut off always brings a lady companion with her, and sometimes they bring two or three. Their conversation while I am at work would make you laugh. A girl was in here with her mother the other day and had her hair cut quite short. It was the first time the shears had ever touched the girl's hair, and she shook with fear when I began and she felt the cold steel on her neck. Two sisters were in one day last week, and when I cut off the hair of one the tears ran down the cheeks of the other like rain drops. Queer creatures these women, aren't they?"
"Is there any particular style in cutting ladies' hair now?"
"Well, the most of those who have been here have had their hair cut very short on the back of the head—indeed, almost as close as young men wear their hair—and moderately good length on top. They want it long enough on top to frizz, or curl, or to wear in a bang."—[Rochester Democrat.]

An Artificial Volcano.
It was formed spontaneously at the Macungie furnace, in Lehigh County, Pa., on the top of a car of melted iron cinders. As the extreme crust of the slag cooled, and consequently contracted, the interior gases, cramped for want of room, burst out at the surface in jets and spurts as in a natural volcanic eruption, and proportionately quite as high, gradually forming the frustum of an irregular cone, with an opening in the center from bottom to top. Through this opening the melted matter was forced up from the mass below, running over at the top of the cone on all sides and dripping downward, cooled into beautiful stalactical forms. The height of the cone is twenty inches, outside diameter at bottom fifteen inches, and at the top five inches. Its growth occupied half an hour. Its weight is ninety pounds. This is a good illustration of the manner in which volcanic peaks are supposed to be naturally formed, confirming the theory that, as the crust of the earth contracts by cooling, the interior gases and melted matter requiring more room, mountain ranges are raised, and, at the weaker points, openings are forced, from which the imprisoned matter escapes and volcanic peaks and craters are formed, just as in the specimen above described.—[Lancaster (Pa.) New Era.]

Impertinent Inferences.
The elephant is a very bad-behaved animal. He turns up his nose at everything that is given him to eat.
A young man's head is like a piece of timber. Nothing permanent can be made of it while it is full of sap.
The fashion of going abroad dates from the time when the chief priest and the Levite passed by on the other side.
A philosopher says: "Never judge a man by the size of his shoes." No. It is always safer to judge him by the size of his ears.
A scientific journal says "few fishes die a natural death." That is not our fault. Just as many die a natural death as if we didn't go a-fishing.
"A girl who permits of no familiarities by the gentleman of the house" advertised in Cincinnati for a situation, and she received 580 answers in two days.
Land on Wall Street costs $6,000,000 an acre. Although that would seem too high for farming purposes, yet a good deal of money is made (and lost) on wheat there.
A Texas judge fined a man for calling him a liar while court was in session. The judge, in explaining to the man's friends, said: "I know that I am a liar, but not while court is in session, gentlemen."

A Child Devoured by a Dog.
News has just arrived in town of a horrible death which occurred across the Brazos River, east of this place, on the farm of Dr. Ross, a few months-old negro child being literally devoured by a dog. The family left the house, leaving their baby in the cradle. In a short time the father had cause to return for something, when on entering the house a horrible and sickening sight met his gaze. The dog had pulled the baby out of the cradle, and had him on the floor face down. The dog looked up unconcerned on the entry of the father, and again began tearing the flesh of the child. The father kicked the brute off, and on examining the child found that the dog had torn away and eaten all of the flesh and great muscles of the thighs and buttocks, leaving the bones glistening in a most horrible manner. The little victim lived until the next day, when death relieved it of its sufferings. The dog was killed immediately.—[Sealy, Texas, Cor. Galveston News.]

Saratoga Village Religion.
Deacon Knapp has been the main pillar of the Saratoga Methodist Church for over 40 years. Every Sunday morning has found him in the center pew of the old church. One month ago the old deacon died. A few weeks after the pastor called on the deacon's son, Ben. Ben had not "experienced the wrath to come" like his father, and had left the old pew vacant.
"Now, Ben," said the pastor, "for over 40 years your father has occupied that same old pew in the center of the church. He has enjoyed my sermons all these years, and I hope to see you in the same old pew."
"But father and I are different," said Ben. "It would be harder for me to sit here than for father."
"Why harder for you, Ben?" asked the deacon.
"Because," said Ben, "father, you know, was deaf."

In Great Britain only holders of licenses are permitted to make physiological experiments on living animals. During 1884 the number of licenses issued was 49. Of the 145 experiments performed, 99 consisted simply in the introduction of a virus; 24 were experiments in cases of suspected poisoning; 10 were to determine the action of poisons on fish and five were on the effects of absolutely pure water on fish.

Tired and Languid Women.
How many women there are of whom these words are true: "They feel languid and tired, hardly able to bear their weight on their feet, the bloom all gone from their cheeks, irritable and cross without meaning to be, nerves all upset, worried with the children, fretted over little things, a burden to themselves, and yet with good sense disease." What a pity it is. But a few bottles of Parker's Tonic will drive all this away, and relieve the troubles peculiar to their sex.
Wife.—"What's the matter, dear? You seem to be in a quandary."
Husband.—"I am. I got a letter from my friend, Congressman X., today, in which he requests that it be not published, and I can't make up my mind what paper to take it to."

Imitation is said to be the sincerest kind of flattery. If this be so, what a number of flatterers St. Jacobs Oil must have? They are constantly trying to imitate it, but always fail. It alone conquers pain.

The Underclothing of Princess Beatrice.
Just now the trousseau of the Princess Beatrice is the engrossing topic of conversation in fashionable circles on both sides of the channel. The newspapers have exhausted the entire vocabulary of fashion in their descriptions of it. The exquisite articles of batist, incrustated with ancient point and antique guipure, that have been furnished by Doucet, are of a kind to create an epoch in the history of dress. Some of the chemises of her Royal Highness, purchased for her marriage, are so fine as to be almost impalpable, and might easily be drawn through her wedding ring.

An Internal Revolution.
Which enables the stomach to throw off the yoke of dyspepsia, is effected through the aid of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a most efficient ally in warding off disorders which affect the digestive organs, the liver and the bowels. When the dyspeptic experiences heartburn, wind on the stomach, or any of the other familiar symptoms of his malady, a wineglass full of this marvellous stomachic will dissipate them, and a persistence of the remedy bring about a cure. Constipation and biliousness, evils to the relief of which aperients and cathartics are inadequate, also yield to this fine alternative. The restoration of appetite and nightly repose, and the disappearance of those nervous symptoms that habitually annoy the chronic sufferer from dyspepsia also ensue upon the use of the Bitters, which is likewise a standard remedy and preventative of fever and ague, rheumatism, kidney and bladder troubles, and debility.
