"Pardon me," said the stranger;
"but I have come all the way from London to ask you a kindness."

Castelar smiled, and with true Spanish courtesy, placed himself at the disposition of the strange gentleman.

"I desire," said the latter, "that you will kiss this lady, who is my daughter."

"Sir!" exclaimed Castelar.

"Permit me to explain," continued the Englishman. "When my daughter was born I resolved that she should never marry until she was kissed by the three greatest living men of the age. I took her to Caprera, where she was kissed by Garibaldi; afterward to Belgium, in order that Victor Hugo might kesher, and now I bring her to your Your kiss is all that is necessary to complete her happiness, as she hapromised her heart to a young feller who is waiting your action, in Part. promised her heart to a young fell

Rise and Fall of Mining Towns.

Leadville is one of the great min-ing towns of the West which have began to decline in population. common enough for small and littleknown places to die as rapidly as they grew, but cities like Virginia City and Leadville seem more permanent, and apparently should escape the fate of less pretentious places. Leadville, however, has fallen from 14,820 inhabitants in 1880, to 11,066 by the Colorado State census just being completed. Denver, on the other hand, shows the stability of a true city of diversified industries and many resources, as well as the won-derful growth of the West. In 1880 Denver had 35,000 people, and now the census shows 54,000, a gain of nearly four-sevenths in five years.— Cleveland Leader.
