Feminities.

The handsome jewels are now set in silver, instead of gold.

A Santa Cruz girl swims so fast that she goes out into the bay and catches diver birds.

A girl at a Maine summer resort, carves skulls and crossbones on the trees thereabouts, but in other respects is normally frivolous and blithesome.—(Chicago Herald.)

We have always had a bulky belief that woman would some day be emancipated. Paper dishes have been invented.—(Chicago Ledger.)

Hostess (at an evening party)—"Mrs. Hendricks, will you step with me a moment? I want to make you acquainted with Mrs. Tomlinson. You will like her, I am sure."

Mrs. Hendricks—"Excuse me, if you please, Mrs. Jones, but I would rather not. You see, we—both live in the same flat."—(New York Times.)

An Ohio court has decided that the husband is the legal owner of the wife's clothes. If that isn't like an Ohio man. The minute the administration changes he looks around for something else that he can grab. Well, one comfort for the woman, the Ohio man may own his wife's clothes, but he can't wear 'em. And she can—and frequently does—wear his.—(Bob Burdette.)

Attendants at the Harrisburg Inmate Hospital, where Miss Addie Brickle was confined for nearly thirty years, for extravagance and for buying goods she could not pay for, are now asserting their belief that she was undoubtedly insane, because she talked continuously about dress and fashions and "put on airs" in the presence of gentlemen.—(Indianapolis Journal.)

In the spring of '68, on the Cache-la-Poudre River, in Northern Colorado, there was married Miss Mary Hopkins to Mr. James Theobald. The bride, who was barely 16, then soon developed an absolute mania for the marriage ceremony. The bride of that day is now living with a seventh man, who has responded with her to the marriage service, and every one of these seven men is today alive and well, and from none of these has the woman been divorced, while the ceremony in every case has been duly performed by Justice or preacher.

The distinguished President of Princeton College, Dr. McCosh, has two daughters who are great walkers. They are in the habit of walking to Trenton and back, a distance of about twenty miles, where they do their shopping. One day a dude accosted Miss Bridget McCosh on the road, and said in the usual manner: "Beg pardon, but may I walk with you?" She replied: "Certainly," and let herself out a little. After the first half mile the masker began to gasp, and then, as she passed on with a smile, he sat down panting on a mile stone, and mopped the perspiration from his brow.—(Chicago Tribune.)

The Poet's Cabin.

The log cabin of Joaquin Miller, the poet, on Meridian hill, near Washington, is becoming more and more an object of interest to tourists and pilgrims. Its elevation affords a poet's-eye-view of the Potomac, wide as the Amazon, of the great, broad city, far extending as Damascus, and of that beautiful, graceful, symmetrical dome. Not one grand, gorgeous sunset is lost from this height where lies repose. The interior as well as the exterior of this comfortable cabin is a reproduction of what the far West still contains. There are the tow latch string and the wooden latch with its unapproachable rattle. The floor has neither mats nor carpets, but rugs of furs. The broad bed is covered and lined with the skins of wild animals. Wooden tables, with no ornament or covering and without books, hold the poet's loose manuscripts of his happiest and unhappiest thoughts. The fireplace mantel alone contains signs of 'an civilization—some cabinet portraits of a few dearest friends. The kitchen, garret, well, and other surroundings are all of the West—western.—(New York Graphic.)

A Troy man shot at a hen with a revolver and hit a neighbor who was sitting on the fence watching him. Both are agreed that the bullet glanced from the hen.—(Burlington Free Press.)

Cure For Piles.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, after retiring at night, is a common attendant. Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense itching, and effecting a permanent cure. Price 50 cents. Address The Dr. Bosanko Medicine Co., Piqua, O. Sold by J. W. Conn.
