IMMIGRATION PROBLEMS.

THERE are indications of a growing tendency to put up the bars and hold the United States more closely as the heritage of the people already in possession. It is an incident of growth. Instead of having more spare land than we know what to do with, we are beginning to touch the limits of our domain. Both great political parties in the last presidential campaign incorporated in their platforms planks opposing the acquisition of large tracts of land by aliens. It has been suggested that the discussion of the Chinese question by congress this session be accompanied by an inquiry regarding the desirability of continuing our present liberal policy toward immigrants of all nations; with the hint that, although special objections are urged against the Chinese, some reason may be found for shutting out objectionable classes of other immigrants.

Admission to this country is a favor to be sought by aliens, not a right to be demanded. We have thrown open our doors of our own free will to let them in. Henceforth we may more and more exercise discretion about admitting immigrants. What shape that discretion may assume is yet in doubt. It is certain that more rigorous scrutiny will be observed regarding the character of immigrants and their power of self-sustenance. Guarantees may be demanded of ability of maintenance for a required period. The criminals, the paupers, the "ner-do-wells," the "sick, lame and lazy" may be weeded out. As population increases and opportunities decrease, we shall demand the best material as a surety against the immigrant becoming a charge upon the community.

As freedom of entrance into the country is curtailed, so admission to the privileges and advantages of citizenship will be better defined. Alien landholding cannot long endure. For residents not citizens, but who propose permanent settlement, some provision for the acquisition of real property, similar, perhaps, to the rights of denizenship under English law, will relieve them from any undue hardship.

Beyond some such conditions as above indicated it is doubtful if any attempt will be made to restrict the immigration of Caucasian races. So long as personally objectionable individuals of those races are barred out, the problem of over-immigration will constantly tend to solve itself. As our waste places begin to fill up, opportunities will become fewer and inducements less, resulting in the decline of immigration, until an approximate equilibrium is established. New countries are also being opened to the overflow of European population, and by and by South America, Africa and Oceania will take our place as the "refuge for the oppressed."

COMMISSIONER SPARKS has issued a decision to the effect that the Northern Pacific railroad company has no land grant between Portland and Tacoma. The president of the company says he will appeal to the supreme court. The decision affects the odd numbered sections of land along the Columbia river and from Kalama to the Sound, a distance of over 100 miles, aggregating nearly two and a half million acres of land.

EASTERN people are accustomed to think of an Indian reservation as being about the size of a large farm, or, in exceptional instances, as large as an average township. But the Sioux reservation of south Dakota is as large as the states of New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island put together. The Indians are the true landed aristocracy of this country.

As soon as a silver dollar is coined, says the Denver News, it is put in a burglar proof vault and fastened in with a time lock. Then the coyotes of the national banks sit around and howl because that dollar doesn't "circulate." How can it circulate when it can't get out?
