WHISTLING.
Some Reasons Why Men and Even Women Whistle.

It is an accomplishment which proves very useful in a variety of emergencies. Many a young man going home from seeing his girl and plodding over a lonely country road would have been scared to death only that he had whistled up his courage; otherwise he would have been looking about for ghosts and highwaymen and got frightened by the sound of every falling leaf or perambulating cat. The whistle prevents him from hearing mysterious sounds and his attention being taken up with trying to follow the tune and working his eyebrows in confusion, will have no time to look about for what might be lying in wait for him. And before he knows it, he will arrive at the paternal domicile and have to study about getting into the house without awakening his father.

Many a man and a great many more ladies have been prevented from committing the sin of profanity because they whistled when they pounced their forefinger instead of the tack with which they were attempting to fasten the carpet toward the evening of a spring-cleaning day.

Men whistle when they are happy and they whistle when they are sad. When you see a carpenter or a house painter pushing the plane or slapping on the paint and whistling a lively air at the same time set him down as a man who pays his debts, is cheerful at home, and never whips the children. When the latter task has to be performed, his wife has to do it. When a man is sad he whistles in a doleful tone. Nine times out of ten he won't choose a dismal air, but he will whistle a lively tune, a hornpipe or a negro minstrel end song. And he will draw the melody in and out between his lips in a way to draw tears from all listeners. Sometimes a man accomplishes the same result when he is cheerful and trying to whistle real good.

When a man is studying some complex problem, wondering how he can live at the rate of $2,000 a year on a $500 income, or something of that sort, if he has not got something to smoke he will whistle. He will walk up and down the room or the back yard, or he will sit in a rocking-chair and thrust his hands as far as the elbows into his pants pockets and whistle—whistle softly.

When a man is suddenly surprised at a preposterous statement, if he is very profane he will say: "H— and d—nation!" If mildly profane he will say: "The d—!" If not at all wicked he will whistle: "W-h-e-w!"

Girls cannot whistle well as a rule. Now and then there is one who can, but she is an honorable exception to the rule. There is one pretty, golden-haired creature in Denver, who can whistle first-rate, but the boys usually do not appreciate it, and they let her know it. But girls, as a rule, whistle in a jerky, disconnected sort of way and groan mildly between the notes.

There used to be a pious old deacon of the Baptist Church who was continually whistling, although nobody ever was known to hear him. He was a fat, happy-looking old gentleman, and he used to walk with a slow, rolling gait, which, in a shorter man and one of quicker movements, would have degenerated into a waddle. He always walked with his hands behind him and his lips pursed into the attitude of a perpetual whistle. Thus he would roll along the quiet streets of the town where he passed his peaceful life, ever with the whistle just about to emerge from his lips, but still it never escaped. When he was very young, his schoolmates, his sweetheart, and later his wife, and the brethren and sisters in the church, his neighbors, children, and grandchildren, at the early stages of their acquaintance with him, waited for the tune, but all were disappointed and he died and made no sound. Doubtless there was a tune in his mind of so rollicking and worldly a character that his position in the church would not allow him to let it go forth to set a bad example to the young. And so he heroically restrained the earthly desire and went down to his grave with the wicker upon his lips and the world none the worse for his having whistled all to himself.—Denver Tribune.

Like His Father.

The other evening there were several visitors at Colonel Grandson's house. The colonel takes great delight in "showing off" his little son, and when the boy appeared at the parlor door the colonel said:—"Come in, Henry. Speak to the ladies and gentlemen. Ah, that's a man."
"He is a fine little fellow," said Mrs. Grandson, one of the visitors.
"Come here, my little man."
The boy approached her, and permitted her to lift him onto her lap.
"Why, you are heavy. How old are you?"
"Six years, goin' on seven."
"Yes, and you'll soon be a man. What are you going to do when you become a man?"
"Do like pa does."
"How does he do?"
"Oh, sometimes when he comes home at night he falls over a chair—"
"Henry!" exclaimed the colonel.
"Falls over a chair, and when maw gets mad he says it's a pretty way for a woman to go on just because a man takes two beers and—"
The colonel had seized him.

Odd Marriages.

The Rev. D. R. Lowell, of the Ash Grove Methodist Church in this city, read a paper before a small but attentive gathering in the lecture room of the Hudson Avenue Methodist Church. He dwelt upon the different ways that people present themselves for marriage, the sad results of some marriages, and the amusing incidents that occur. Mr. Lowell said: "All that pertains to the work of the ministry is of interest, and profitable to us as we exchange our thoughts in conference. Every minister has various experiences in starting people in married life. Sometimes these experiences are pleasant, some times sad and amusing, and often times very annoying.

"One of the strange cases was where a colored man had become enamored of an Irish girl, and they finally presented themselves for marriage. After the ceremony had been performed they left apparently happy. On the day following, the man returned and wanted the marriage undone, but all I could do was simply to refer them to a lawyer. Another case that is amusing, and yet sad, is where I once married a young couple and when I had pronounced them man and wife the young man paid me $1, and explained he was unable to pay more, as he had just lost what little money he had possessed. A short time afterward his wife died and this young man came to borrow $2 from me, promising to return it in a day or two; but instead of returning it he went to a neighboring minister and was remarried on my money. I was once called to a house to perform the rites of marriage, having the certificate, all made out, with me. At the house the friends were all waiting. The table was spread with a bounteous supply. When it was time for the ceremony the bridegroom came forward, not leaning on the arm of the groom, but she was supporting him. He was so much under the influence of liquor as to be unable to walk. At my request he was seated and I had a talk with the intended bride, and learned that she was the daughter of rich and respectable parents. Her father was to shower a dowry of $10,000 on her at the time of marriage, and she insisted on marrying this poor drunken wretch, who did not own a dollar. I flatly refused, and left the house, taking the certificate with me, as I did not deem it right to marry a man that did not know what he was about.

"These are some of the few cases that have come to my notice. Oftentimes I am compelled to turn couples away that present themselves for marriage, for various reasons. The fees of ministers vary for performing the ceremony. Sometimes they receive as high as $20 and more, and range from that as low as $1 and nothing. Oftentimes some ask to have the fee trusted, which is always done. Some frequently agree to pay more, and others never pay at all."—[Albany Express.

What a Young Couple Did.

A charming family hotel was built in a suburb of Boston two years since. It was furnished with all modern conveniences and inconveniences. There were electric bells in a row at the door, so that the afternoon caller could ring up nine different and peaceful maid servants before getting into communication with the family she came to see; there were fire-escapes and telephones, and elevators and speaking tubes, and, for aught I know, safety-valves and sub-marine cables. But the crowning joy of all was the fact that no children were allowed within its walls. It was built for the accommodation of childless couples, and to ten childless couples were the suites let. How great was the quiet and calm of that sheltered retreat, until one ill-starred morning, when the cry of an infant, shrilly and piteously, broke the stillness! Horror and indignation on the part of nine guiltless couples; and yet, so weak is humanity, that before the end of the second year there were children in seven of the ten families. The childless couples were childless no more, and when the owner of the building complained to his friends of the unfair treatment he had received at the hands of his tenants, they all laughed in his face and advised him to let apartments to bachelors.

Fresh Complexions.

If you have humors, pimples, boils, eruptions, it is because your system needs toning and purifying. Nothing gives such good health, smooth skin and vigorous feeling as Simmons' Liver Regulator, purely vegetable and not unpleasant to the taste. The Regulator stimulates the liver, cleanses the eyes and skin of yellowness, improves digestion and makes the breath pure and sweet.
