The Care of Children.

"What more can I give my children than I am giving them?" asked an anxious young mother of a matron who had successfully reared a large family. "I think, my dear, they would be benefited by a little wholesome neglect," was the reply. It was the result of keen observation, and a recognition of the fact that the children in question were kept in a continual state of worry by being watched. The mother's eye and care was so omnipresent that their spontaneity was checked, and, as one remarked, life for them was one eternal "don't."

Said another in recalling reminis-cences of childhood: "When I was a child I was rendered miserable by being constantly watched and trained.
I was very fond of being alone, at times. I could give no reason for it, but I loved to stay in unoccupied rooms, or finding a hiding place among the bushes in the garden, there to amuse myself with my own plays and fancies. My mother was suspicious of this meant evil of some kind, and constant surveillance and reprimand for going off by myself is one of the unpleasant memories of my childhood."

Nothing should be more carefully respected and guarded than the individuality of a child. The atmosphere of home should be that of love and safety, in which all the natural inclinations of children should be allowed to act spontaneously. Their wishes for employment and possession of their own should be respected, their tastes in matters of food and dress consulted in so far as consistent with the convenience of those around. We have heard grown up people tell of the distaste they had when children to certain kinds of food which they were compelled to eat, or certain kinds of clothes which they were compelled to wear.
It used to be a rule in many families brought up in the Puritan style that a child must eat all the crusts of his bread, or all the fat on his meat, or all the food on his plate. Such rules are barbarous and we trust nearly obsolete, yet children's taste in food ought to be more considered than it is. Food that is distasteful should never be forced upon them, and to procure for them food which they enjoy, will in most cases be to procure such food as their systems require. So of taste in dress. Children may sometimes have an antipathy to particular colors, or particular garments, and a preference for others.
If possible these tastes should always be respected, guarding, of course, against encouraging or fostering vanity.

So of the occupations and employments of children; as far as possible they should be left to follow their own inclinations when they are harmless. If your little girl would rather play with dolls, why, let her have them, and see that she has a board, or a place where she can drive them without reproach. If your little boy always wants to hitch the chairs up for horses and can enjoy himself happily as an imaginary stage driver, set apart certain chairs for him and let him drive unmolested and un-watched. If he begs for tools let him have them; if he wants pencils or paint procure them for him. The only way by which parents can secure the confidence of their children is first to show confidence in them.
Confidence must be won; it can never be forced, not even from the little ones who play around our knees.

A happy childhood is the greatest heritage parents can give to their children. Its memory will brighten and cheer the whole of life. To be happy it must to a certain extent be unrestrained. The home playground should have no dangerous places from which children must be for-bidden and guarded. And in the shelter of the home and the playground, let the young spirits develop freely, spontaneously, happily. Let them have their little secrets, their own possessions which no one shall interfere with, their own plays, and, so far as it is consistent with the welfare and comfort of others, their own way. Life will discipline them harshly enough when parents can no longer shield them from sorrow.—[Chicago Weekly Magazine.

Courting Twins.
A young man who was courting a girl who had a twin sister was terribly imposed upon. She went out of town three weeks and employed her sister as a substitute in the sitting-up-at-night business during her absence.
The young man called five nights a week, as usual, and didn't leave till after midnight, without detecting the imposition. When he learned of the trick that had been played upon him, he got mad and broke off the engagement. The twins looked as much alike as two capital P's and he said that he might be fooled into marrying the one that he didn't love.
It was certainly a narrow escape, though, come to think about it, we can't see what difference it would have made as long as ignorance was bliss and the twins didn't object.
Having young lady twins in the house is rather a neat arrangement.
When a young man is so infuriated that he calls seven nights a week, they can take turns sitting up with him and thus look fresh and wide-awake every other evening alternately, anyway. No sensible young man should object to such an admirable health-preserving scheme, either.—[Drake's Magazine.

Handkerchiefs.

A handkerchief was the square of fine linen formerly employed by women to cover the head, but more recently used in the hand, and not as a covering only. The term handkerchief is not met with earlier than in the fifteenth century, when in the "Wardrobe Accounts of Edward IV." we find "V dozen handkerchiefs" made by one Alice Shapster, to whom a payment had been made.
Modern handkerchiefs are to be had of different dimensions, those for women being smaller than those for men. They are produced in silk, both Chinese and Indian, as well as in English; of cambric, cotton, and muslin; some are designed for the pocket and others for the neck.

Some of the Indian silk ones are in self-colors others have patterns upon them and are necessarily of two colors. These are known as bandana handkerchiefs. Cambric, muslin, cotton and gingham handkerchiefs are to be had with hemstitch or ribbon borders, and some are more or less embroidered; others have black or colored borders in various designs.

Bales of colored cotton handkerchiefs are manufactured in this country in Oriental colors and designs, so prepared to suit the native taste for the Indian export trade. Trimmings of lace applied to handkerchiefs came first into fashion in the reign of Queen Elizabeth.

Handkerchiefs were wrought With names and true-love knots.
—Faint Bacon's Frolics, A. D. 1604.

Have you not seen a handkerchief Spotted with strawberries in your wife's hand?

A Phenomenal Cucumber and Vine.

William H. O'Dwyer, a lawyer, living at No. 133 West One Hundred and Twenty-third Street, has occupied some of his leisure time during the summer in amateur farming. One of his labors has been to nurse the California cucumber, and the result is a dozen or more specimens of various sizes. The largest of these is four feet and ten inches long and fifty-eight inches in circumference.
One day, after a shower, the vine grew two feet in three hours. He was the only witness of this remarkable phenomenon, but will vouch for the truth of the narrative.—[New York Tribune.

Robert Collyer's Little Ones.

In a street-talk with Rev. Robert Collyer the other day the genial clergyman told me the following:
"Little Ethel had just commenced to study her catechism in my church and her mother was hearing her say it."
"Now, Ethel," her mother commenced, "what must you first do before you can have your sins forgiven?"
"I des," said Ethel very thoughtfully, "I des I must first go out and commit the sin."—[St. Louis Republican.

"Knights of the Bath."

A few days ago a well-known society young man shocked one of his lady friends by his ignorance of history. It was after a dinner party at his house, and she was telling him what she had learned in her private history class. One thing led to another, and all the time he was getting into deeper water. At last she surprised him by inquiring: "Now, tell me Mr. , what are the Knights of the Bath?"
He stammered for a while, and finally blurted out: "Why, Saturday nights, I suppose."—[Buffalo Courier

The danger that always goes along with a standard family medicine is the counterfeit or fraud, which follows as darkness does light. Protection against this danger lies in careful observation of what, and of whom, you buy. Doubt the honesty of any druggist who states there is any other Simmons Liver Regulator than that prepared by H. J.
Zellin & Co., Sole Proprietors; or that there is any liver medicine having like effective curative properties, or containing the same ingredients.

In Southern Russia vineyards are freed from phylloxera by planting hemp near the infected vines. The parasites are attracted to the hemp by its strong odor, and the roots prove to be poisonous to them.

You Can Have It.

"My dear, what would I give to have your hair?" is often said by middle-aged ladies to young ones. Madam, you may have just such hair. Parker's Hair Balsam will give it to you. It will stop your hair from falling off, restore the original color and make it long, thick, soft and glossy. You need not stand helplessly envying the girls.
The Balsam is not oily, not a dye, but is an elegant dressing, and is especially recommended for its cleanliness and purity.

From nearly 400 singers—including lieved of their pains by St. Jacobs Oil.
