For This Week Only! The following table is designed to show the rates of direct taration for State as distinguished from local purposes in the various States of the Union. The first column gives the legal tax-rate based upon the assessed valuation of property. As the second column, which is taken from the last federal census, demon-strates, the ratio of assessed value to true value varies very much in the differ-ent States. For instance, in filmois the ent States. For instance, in Illinois th assessed valuation is but 25.44 per cent of the estimated true value of all property in the State. In Rhode Island it is 60.13 per' cent. The third column shows the ratio of the tax levied to the actual value of all property in the respective States:
