A Tucson, Arizona, special says: Further information reveals the fact that the killing of Captain Crawford was not only a cold blooded murder, but that it was merely the climax to a long series of outrages perpetrated upon American citizens. It has long been known that mines of undoubted richness exist in Sonora and hun-dreds of Americans have flocked to that region to assist in their develop-ment. Nothing but the stern-est attitude on the part of the executive and congress can allay the feel ing of anxiety in this matter, and the feeling prevails that a reference to the ordinary channels of diplomacy will be playing into the hands of the Mexicans.
