The Daily Astorian.

ASTORIA, OREGON:

THURSDAY.....FEBRUARY 18, 1886

THE Tacoma News thinks that newspaper editorials should be signed by the authors thereof. Good idea.

WORK on the extension of the O. P. R. R., from Corvallis to Albany, will begin on the first of next month.

HANNIBAL HAMLIN, the old political veteran, says, "the highway of politics is strewn with the bones of men who have written foolish letters."

IT is said in London that since Gladstone's decision has been generally known to give the land law and reform measures precedence over home rule, all parties are prepared to give their support to prolonged continuance of the present government in power on this basis.

DOWN South they are saying that Cleveland's renomination in '88 is a certainty, as he is "the only man that can beat Blaine." But it is by no means assured that Blaine will be run in '88. '76, '80 and '84, three times and out. The nation is full of good and great men.

IN the house on the 16th, the committee on public lands decided to recommend forfeiture of the unpatented land grant of the California & Oregon and the Oregon & California roads. Henley of California, was instructed to report his bill to the house. There were four votes against the bill in the committee.

IT is openly talked, says the Walla Walla Journal, that money whiskey, sluggers and prostitutes were means employed by the railroad lobby to accomplish their ends at Olympia. That cash bribes were used there is no manner of doubt, though the proof may be difficult of attainment. Further light on the infamous inner history of the recent legislative session will probably soon be forthcoming.

IT is openly asserted in Washington territory journals that five of the twelve members of the recent territorial council were owned body and breeches by the railroad corporations and that these five voted solidly for the corporations and against the people on every occasion. Some of the newspapers name them and make specific charges. These pesky newspapers —they won't even let a thrifty legislator alone when he sees a chance to make a stake, even by selling out the people that sent him to the capital to represent them.

GEN. SHERMAN thinks the tyranny of the press is just awful. It was kind of rough on the gallant old veteran to give him away as some of the eastern journals did in that little contradiction of his where he wrote adverse criticism of Grant, and then denied it. Besides the St. Louis papers have treated him very shabbily; and, take it altogether, the general has just ground for complaint. But he should remember how he gagged and sat down on the newspaper boys in '63, '64 and '65. He has forgotten and they haven't. That is the difference.

THE Oregonian concedes that we have lucid intervals, amounting to at least four weeks in a month. In this we enjoy a distinguished advantage over the gentleman who through mistaken sympathy on the part of the other stockholders is allowed to edit the Oregonian. He is crazy all the time. Sometimes it is Mitchell, sometimes the Columbia river of commerce, sometimes it is riot, but he always sees ghosts and bats and, like all others of his unfortunate class, grows angry at those who refuse to see things in the distorted vision furnished him by his poor brain. Charity suggests consideration and a reply tempered by sympathy. It is indeed sad to contemplate a wreck, and the hallucinations of a once brilliant mind furnish food for regretful reminiscence on the part of his friends and enemies alike. He fain would be our monitor. He only succeeds in being a horrible example, —and a warning.
