GRANT VS. MARK TWAIN.

Two Accounts of One Campaign From Opposite Points.

I took my regiment to Palmyra and remained there for a few days, until relieved by the Nineteenth Illinois Infantry. From Palmyra I proceeded to Salt River, the railroad bridge over which had been destroyed by the enemy. Col. John M. Palmer at that time commanded the Thirteenth Illinois, which was acting as a guard to workmen who where engaged in rebuilding the bridge. Palmer was my senior and commanded the two regiments as long as we remained together. The bridge was finished in about two weeks, and I received orders to move against Col. Thomas Harris, who was said to be encamped at the little town of Florida, some 25 miles south of where we then were. . . . . .

As we approached the brow of the hill from which it was expected we could see Harris's camp, and possibly find men ready formed to meet us, my heart kept getting higher and higher until it felt to me as though it was in my throat. I would have given anything then to have been back in Illinois, but I had not the usual courage to halt and consider what to do; I kept right on. When we reached a point from which the valley below was in full view, I halted. The place where Harris had been encamped a few days before was still there, and the marks of a recent engagement were plainly visible, but the troops were gone. My heart resumed its place. It occurred to me at once that Harris had been as much afraid of me as I had been of him. This was a view of the question I had never taken before; but it was one I never forgot afterward. From that event to the close of the war I never experienced trepidation upon confronting an enemy, though I always felt more or less anxiety.

Inquiries at the village of Florida divulged the fact that Col. Harris, learning of my intended movement, while my transportation was being collected, took time by the forelock and left Florida before I had started from Salt River. He had increased the distance between us by 40 miles. The next day I started back to my old camp at Salt River.—[From the Personal Memoirs of U. S. Grant.

The rest of my war experience was of a piece with what I have already told of it. We kept monotonously falling back upon one camp or another, and eating up the country. . . . . .

The last camp which we fell back upon was in a hollow near the village of Florida, where I was born—in Monroe County. Here we were warned one day that a Union colonel was sweeping down on us with a whole regiment at his heels. This looked decidedly serious. Our boys went apart and consulted; then we went back and told the other companies present that the war was a disappointment to us and we were going to disband. They were getting ready themselves to fall back on some place or other and were only waiting for Gen. Tom Harris, who was expected to arrive at any moment; so they tried to persuade us to wait a little while, but the majority of us said no, we were accustomed to falling back, and didn't need any of Tom Harris's help; we could get along perfectly well without him, and save time, too. So about half of our fifteen, including myself, mounted and left on the instant. An hour later we met Gen. Harris on the road. . . . Harris ordered us back; but we told him there was a Union colonel coming with a whole regiment in his wake, and it looked as if there was going to be a disturbance, so we had concluded to go home. . . In time I came to know that Union colonel whose coming frightened us out of the war and crippled the Southern cause to that extent—Gen. Grant. I came within a few hours of seeing him when he was as unknown as I was myself.—[From a War Paper by Mark Twain, in the December Century.

Modes of Courtship.

The tailor presses his suit.

The shoemaker lays his awl at her feet.

The blacksmith strikes the iron when it is hot.

The carpenter says her society adz joy to his existence.

The woodchopper offers himself as her feller.

The mason believes his chances rest on a good foundation when he informs her that refusal would be mortar-fying to him.

The sailor first ascertains how the land lies, then approaches her when she's in stays and informs her that she's in need of a first mate.

The dairyman declares he is bound to heifer and can love no udder.

The furniture dealer is so much in love with her that he is willing to accept her affections on installments, one-tenth down.

The poet woes her with a sonnet, and her big brother starts out in search of him with a shotgun.

The "funny man" approaches her with jokes and puns, and has the dog set on him and loses the skirts of his swallow-tail.

Finally the champion roller-skater rolls into her good graces, and she elopes and marries him.

Mackerel are so plentiful and cheap that the fishermen don't care whether the school keeps or not.

Dainty Boots with Buckles.

Pointed toes to shoes are still fashionable, and Louis XV. heels, but the perfection of these articles is their dainty embroidery. Brides are wearing white satin worked in silver and pearls, with bows of lace or ribbon and tulle caught through pearl buckles. Nothing can well be prettier than the present make of evening shoes, especially those embroidered in gold or silver—sometimes both combined, or with color intermixed. Many are worked in such artistic coloring that they can be worn with almost any dress. They mostly have a tiny buckle in the center of the shoe, and the star-shaped is one of the newest. Stone-colored kid shoes trimmed with brown are pretty; but it is well to avoid Suede shoes—they are unbecoming to the foot. Shoes with toes covered with narrow stitched ribbon can be had in black or white, or any color. They wear well.

The Cromwell shoe holds its own, and a pretty make, with patent leather frouts and morrocco back, having a simple buckle in front, is most becoming to the foot.

Very pretty are the mule or heelless slippers now worn in bedrooms. One, lined with pink and bordered with pink, had the foundation black duchesse satin worked with pink flowers, and a pink kid slipper was edged with white fur.

Riding-boots are made after the Newmarket type with cloth legs (drab or black), and for hunting the butcher boots, of strong leather, are generally adopted. The cloth tops prevent any adhesion of the habit. —[London Queen.

A woman in the northern part of Vermont is telling of the way she fooled the inspecting Dr. Kay, of Newport, on one of the recent Montreal trains. She had determined not to be vaccinated on the train, and so sewed a button under the sleeve of the dress near where the arm is usually scraped. The inspector came along and ordered her to bare her arm. "But it isn't necessary, sir; you can feel the scab," she said. He planted his hand on the button, the woman gave a scream of pretended pain, and Dr. Kay moved along.—[Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

The Yellow Pine of the South.

No wooden flooring that is used is superior to narrow strips of seasoned Georgia yellow pine. A well-laid surface of the wood improves with age and friction, its resinous quality hardens and forms for it a sort of natural varnish. Art, too, has recently touched this sturdy old timber. Thin door panels are sawed out of planks containing thick deposits of rosin. When these panels are placed in doors that the sun can strike, the effect produced is a rich, red wine color, showing inside of the room. There is a process of artificially seasoning pine. There is also one of steaming it, so that the rosin will show uniformly in the board, but the naturally veined surfaces are handsome enough when properly smoothed.

The Beginning of Sickness

Never trifle with what are called small ailments. If you feel inert, with a bitter or bad taste in the mouth, loss of appetite, bowels costive, take at once Simmons Liver Regulator. For the miseries of dyspepsia, the Regulator is a certain and speedy cure.

Hood very quaintly declared that the phrase the "republic of letters" is used to insinuate that the whole tribe of authors are so poor that they have not a sovereign amongst them.
