ASTORIA, OREGON: WEDNESDAY FEBRUARY 24, 188

THE ASTORIA METHOD.

Much is being said regarding the Seattle method, the Tacoma method, the Oregon City method. Permit us to commend as a profitable example "the Astoria method." It is the American method. from that alien class should arise, It is one of sense, of arbitration, of we in Astoria, canners, Knights of recognition of existing facts, of Labor, citizens and residents will harmony and good order. It is a be fully able to cope with it. It proclamation, to those who care to has been met and subdued under read, that Astoria is abundantly less favorable circumstances, and Best on this Market able to take care of herself, and it can again. In the meantime let whatever dirty linen may need it be borne in mind that Astoria is

At the beginning of this agitation the peculiar position occupied by of the population down this way Astoria turned all eyes this way. This community was more interested than any on the coast, not excepting San Francisco. The thousands of Chinese that congregate here made the matter assume more importance than at any other point, and what was a picnic at Tacoma or Seattle with their few hundred heathen would be a widespread havor here. In the popular recognition of this fact lay our remedy. It was seen that while immediate expulsion of the Chinese would paralyze the chief manufacturing industry of Oregon, Creat Literary and Social Merit. to allow things to go on as they had been going was impossible.

There were not wanting those who would be glad to have seen harm befall Astoria. There is something not wholly repugnant to the private mind in the misfortunes of even a friend; it sets off of the non-sufferer who gratulates more does this feeling prevail in The sneers of Portland, the ill-disguised anxiety of Seattle and Tacoma to get stirring news from Astoria, that our excesses might mitigate the memory of their misdeeds, were ineffectual. Astorians were not going to lose their heads over the matter, nor be goaded into actions that in their quieter moments they would regret. Wise counsels prevailed and in a spirit of compromise those who entertained different views on the subject, influenced by self interest, which indirectly influences all actions, met and settled harmoni-The result is that the wheels of business revolve and THE ASTORI AN is pleased to be able to say that no trouble need be looked Astoria. Sensational news-gatherers must look elsewhere for items to make their papers sell. We are all too busy Corner of Water and West Ninth Streets down here to stop to furnish material for our neighbors to sympathize over with us. It is always easier to pity than it is to admire, and while it would be easier for our dear friends in Portland to say they deeply regretted to hear the sad news of trouble in Astoria, yet in their souls they must concede admiration to Astoria for the triumph of good order and common sense.

Comment on the action published yesterday will be general in the newspaper offices of the northwest. The sapient Oregonian will probably conceal its chagrin at the peaceful turn affairs have taken by saying, "Oh yes, you have temporarily bridged over, but when September 1st arrives, what are you going to do then? You'll have to drive the Chinese out then because they won't go without being driven." That'll be all right. It will be time enough to cross the next bridge when we get there. The Chinese are going. They will go. There won't be as many here next June as there are now. There won't be be as many in August as in June. Whatever pressure will be brought to bear to insure or occasion their departure will be done legally and no one can say with truth that the Chinese were forced to leave Astoria. But they will go all the same.

THE ASTORIAN is well aware of the folly of "shouting before you are out of the woods." But the worst of the journey lies behind. There may be trouble next summer when that reckless crowd, the mention of which so pleased the Oregonian last week, will flock in on us from below. The advantage we now possess is that there is no mutual dissension; we present a united front, and in case trouble laundrying, the detergent process wery busy, fairly prosperous, with will be a private one. very prospect of a good season FRANK L.
