The Vanderbilts.

The life of the late William H. Vanderbilt was for the most part a une heaped up by his father-to prevent it from evaporating, as all property except lands tends everywhere to evaporate. The time is coming, if it has not already come, when greater skill will be required to keep large estates together than was needed to accumulate them, and this for the very simple reason that it is the nature of capital to wear out, the most permanent forms requiring incessant care and renewal. Even such fixtures as the New York Central Railroad are exposed to killing competition, and we have seen the shares of this remarkable prop-erty once reckoned the most desirable form of investment next to govcared me of Psoriasis, or Scaly Skin, in eight days, after the doctors whom I had consulted gave me no help or encouragement.

Newton N. J. JOHN J. CASE. D.D.S.

DISTRESSING ERUPYIONS

Your CUTICURA REMEDIES performed a wonderful cure last summer on one of our customers, an old gentleman of seventy years of age, who suffered with a fearfully distressing the president of the Erie railway, now deceased, on the occasion of a condeceased, on the occasion of a conference with the commodore, in which a modus vicendi was patched up between them, said: "Now, commo-dore, nothing can hurt the New York Central until somebody builds a narrow-gauge road on the other side of the Mohawk." The idea of a new double-track steel railway parallel-ing the Central was beyond the conception of either of the conferees. The commodore reflected for a mo-ment and then exclaimed: "It is place when the West Shore road was in full operation, and it may be af-firmed that the old commodore never had a task of such difficulty set before him as that which his son grap-pled when the West Shore problem confronted him.

Mr. Vanderbilt's business career was checkered with like problems from the day when he inherited the bulk of his father's wealth to the day of his own death. The very last hour and minute of his own life were absorbed by the ceaseless strug-gle to hold on to property which was always slipping from him. The best investment he ever made was his large purchase of United States bonds. This required no care, no conferences with Garrett, or Gould, or Roberts, no surrender to the Nickel Platers, no fighting with the West Shore crowd. But United States bonds come to an end event-ually, and the inheritors of the Vanderbilt wealth will have to struggle as he struggled, and as less wealthy persons struggle, to keep together the accumulations of the old commodore. They will probably not be able to do so. The chances are largely against the preservation of the estate in a lump beyond one mere generation, although its bulk is sufficient to endow many rich fam-ilies. The lumping of such masses of wealth by the process of settling all but a fraction on one member of a family will not provent its aventual a family will not prevent its eventual dissipation under the grinding power of competition and the ceaseless ray-ages of time. It is fortunate that the forces of nature work as they do to dissipate large fortunes, since such ac-cumulations as the Vanderbilt estate are the never-failing text for communist sponters and the starting-point of almost all attacks upon social order. How far the late William H. Van-derbilt succeeded with the task be-queathed to him by his father the public will not be likely to find out. Not even his executors will be able to answer the question for a long time to come, since death overtook him at a crisis in railway affairs. If he had died a few months earlier the West Shore settlement would in all probability have failed, and wich it would have failed the Pennsylvania settlement, whatever that may be. The absence of a commanding bulk, capable of drawing lesser things to itself by sheer gravitation, would have left a multitude of conflicting forces in play to shatter themselves by useless collision. Whether all the wreckage has been collected together and properly stowed no man is wise enough to say. The man who could do most to make peace as will which shall preserve to him something better than the title of the richest man of his generation.—[New
