Worse Than Death

of Russian Siberia are convicts of the worst type and political offend-ers of the best. The murderer for his villainy, the intelligent and honest Polish rebel for his patriotism, are deemed equally worthy of the punish-ment of slow death. They never see the light of day, but work and sleep all the year round in the depths of the earth, extracting silver or quicksilver, under the eyes of taskmasters who have orders not to spare them. Iron gates, guarded by sentries, close the lodes, or streets, at the bottom of the shaft, and the miners are railed off from one another in gangs of twenty. They sleep within rock-hewn recesses—very kennels into which they must creep on all fours. Prince Lumbomiroski who was authorized to visit one of the mines of the Ural at a time when it was not suspected that he would publish an account of his exploration in French, has given an appalling account of what he saw.

Convicts racked with the joint pains which quicksilver produces; men whose hair and eyebrows had dropped off, and who were gaunt as skeletons, were kept to hard labor under the lash. They have only two holidays a year—Christmas and Easter—and all other days, Sunday included, they must toil until ex-hausted nature robs them of their limbs, when they are hauled up to die in the infirmary.

Five years in the quicksilver pits are enough to turn a man of thirty into an apparant sexagenarian, but some have been known to struggle on for ten years. No man who has served in the mines is ever allowed to return home. The most he can obtain in the way of grace is leave to come up and work in roadways, and it is the promise of this favor as a reward for industry which operates even more than the lash to maintain discipline. Women are employed in the mines as sifters, and get no better treatment than the men. Polish ladies by the dozens have een sent down to rot and die, while the St. Petersburg journals were de-claring that they were living as free colonists, and more recently ladies connected with nihilist conspiracies have been consigned to the mines in pursuance of hard labor. It must lways be understood that a sentence of Siberian hard labor means death. Boston Gazette.

A man must be clothed with soiety, or we shall feel a certain barenness and poverty, as of a dis-laced and unfurnished member. ile is to be dressed in arts and institutions, as well as in body gar ments. Now and then a man exquisitely made can live alone, and must; but coop up most men and you undo them.

Who can set bounds to the possibilities of a man? Once inhale the upper air, being admitted to be-hold the absolute natures of justice and truth, and we learn that man has access to the entire mind of the Creator, is himself the creator in the finite.-(From the Emerson Calen-
