URIEL SEBRER, Lieut, U. S. N., Light-House Inspector.

Shy's Wonderful Fight. Mr. Shy is a stordy, plain-spoken, Mr. Shy is a stordy, plain-spoken, intelligent man, and apparently unaware that he has achieved a feat unexcelled by any of the knights of romance. He was just sitting down to his dinner with his wife and boy, and had one arm in a sling because of some recent injury to the hand. He heard some slight noise in the read stages of the product of the stage of yard, and, glancing through the window just in his rear, he was horrified to see a painted Apache stealthily creeping up. Quick as thought he tore the bandages from his arm, sprang to the corner of his room where his Winchester was resting, and seizing it wheeled around just in time to receive the fire of the in time to receive the fire of the savage, which he instantly returned. Mrs. Shy closed and locked the door at the same moment, and the Indians, seeing that they had a brave man to fight, placed themselves out of view of the window and opened a rattling fire upon the house from all sides. It was a filmsy frame structure, and a bullet would go through the walls as though they were pasteboard. It was a terrible time for about an hour inside of that little house, with the pale, terror-stricken wife and boy crouching in the loft and the desperate ranchman crouching in the room below, firing only when he could see an Indian through the window, listening to the angry zip of the bullets as they tore through the thin walls and whistled about his head. After awhile there was a lull in the firing. A few rods distant from Mr. Shy's house was the house of Mr. A. J. Yeater, his partner in a cettle ranch, and who partner in a cattle ranch, and who was at that time being butchered, in company with his wife, four miles away. The lull in the firing was away. The lull in the firing was caused by the fact that the savages had broken open Mr. Yeater's residence and were making themselves merry eating and drinking and break-ing up the furniture. After getting through with this they fired the house, which in a few moments was a mass of flames. Mr. Shy saw that his own house would be on fire in a few minutes, and for a moment he was well nigh paralyzed with despair. He glanced at his wife and boy, and knew from the ominous signs without that the Indians were only waiting for the flames to drive them out. In a moment his house was on fire, and telling his wife and boy to come down from the loft, he prepared to open the door and make a rush for safety for some large rocks near by. Opening the door he threw his body half way out and fired full at a group of savages; at the same instant he sprang back in the house. The next moment at least a dozen bullets were buried in the door facing. The flames were getting too hot, however, to remain indoors, and Mr. Shy, tell-ing his wife and boy to follow him, sprang outside and made a rush for a large rock near by. When he got within twelve feet of it five savages jumped up from behind it and fired right in his face. By a wonderful providence not a bullet struck him. He instantly started for another large rock, from which another group of redskins fired a volley in his face. A storm of bullets were whistling around him from all sides, but he seemed to bear a charmed life and had the presence of mind before leaving the house to fill his pockets sive and ran the savages in a body some distance away, where they secreted themselves behind some large rocks. He also placed himself behind a rock, and in this position whenever he could see the body of an Indian exposed he fired at it. Meanwhile his little boy had been shot down, and Shy had kept the Indians so busy by his own determined work that Mrs. Shy had an opportunity to get up the gulch. The wounded boy had crawled into a thicket where his father had directed him to go, but not before his devoted sive and ran the savages in a body not one of them touched him. with cartridges and he kept popping away at the savages. Out in the open air and knowing he could no longer be tortured to death like a rat in a hole, all sense of fear left him, and he actually assumed the aggres him to go, but not before his devoted mother, fearlessly exposing herself to the firing, had taken off one of her skirts and wrapped it around the little fellow. There are numberless details connected with the fight which I have no space for, but it is sufficient that this heroic ranchman kept back the savages until dusk, when they retired. Meanwhile Mrs. Shy had made a detour and started on a trip for Deming, twenty miles away, hoping to get assistance for her husband. The poor lady was found in an exhausted condition late

Cure For Piles.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some effection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, after getting warm, is a common attendant. Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile remedy, which acts directly upon the parts of fected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense itching, and effecting a permanent cure.
