What He Was Going to Say.

Geo. W. Peck says of his recent interview with the President: "I had thought of several things I wanted to say to Mr. Cleveland. Several of the boys in Milwaukee had told me to give their love to Grover if I saw him, and I had made up my mind to just give him to understand that he was thought a good deal of up in Wisconsin, and that, so far as I could see, his appointments had given pretty general satisfaction, and that we all wished him well. I intended that the few remarks I should make would be the greatest effort of my life. My idea was to wait till all the gang had passed him, and then bring up the rear, and when he took my hand I would hold on to it and speak about as follows: 'Mr. President, I cannot let this occasion pass without saying to you that the people of Wisconsin are very proud that you have got along as well as you have. The Republicans are hopeful that you will not do anything very brash, and the Democrats will stand by you. Ed. Wall and Bill Dodsworth, who is an old Buffalo boy, Art Delaney, and George Paul, and any quantity of Milwaukee boys, want to be remembered to you.' O, I had a speech as long as my arm that I was going to fire at him, and I fell in behind the crowd and went along. A big hand was reached out, and mine was clasped by the President, at last. I had his hand. I had my head down, to keep me from stepping on the trail of a woman ahead of me, who seemed to linger longer than was necessary. As her trail disappeared, I was just going to look up to say my speech, when he let go of my hand and reached for another fellow just behind me, and the other fellow stepped on a stone-bruise on my heel, the only heel I have got with a stone-bruise on it, and I looked around at the big-footed galoot behind me, and was borne out of sight, and I hope never to see the back of my neck if I had said a word to the President."

Some Cynical Remarks.

He who fears death loses life. Fear is death to pleasure.

The earlier a man has his eyes opened to the realities of life, the sooner he wants to close them.

If there be such a thing as the finger of God, it must be connected with the arm of Justice.

Everybody has more or less cause to be unhappy. Happy is the man who is too busy to be miserable.

He who is always complaining deserves to have good cause to lament.

As there is no method of lengthening life, we must find means to shorten time.

The pessimist who is also a humorist turns his own shroud into a harlequin's jacket, and is there a more appropriate mask in this crazy carnival of human life?

It often happens that fate not only presses a cup of poison to a man's lips, but even makes him drain it slowly, drop by drop.

The proverb that man proposes but God disposes is false. Man does not propose, and God does not dispose.

The world may forgive us for being weak and foolish, but it never condones our superiority. That is the unpardonable crime.

Man should endeavor to correct his faults, but he is a fool if he admits, even to his friends, that he has faults.

Men are always willing to depreciate your good qualifications, and to imitate your bad ones.

It is not strange that very few men know themselves intimately. Most people like to get rid of disagreeable acquaintances.

Only stupid people complain of hard work. Smart people never overwork themselves.

It often happens that fear is merely dread of being afraid.

There is only one immortal. His name is Death.

Barnum's New Year's Advice.

P. T. Barnum prints a card in the Bridgeport papers before New Year's, in which he says:—

"I wish, therefore, to hint to my fellow citizens that the most valuable and cheap New Year's present that one who drinks intoxicants can give to his or her family is a temperance pledge signed and forever adhered to. I have personally known in Bridgeport, young men, single and married, who scarcely earned a living, beyond what they expended for beer and stronger drink, turn about, sign the pledge, and now own the houses they live in, and are laying aside surplus money every year. One city will be greatly benefited if those who are now under the power of that liquid which never did a healthy person a particle of good, will, on the coming New Year's, or now, become total abstainers for life."

Cure For Piles.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some effection of the kidneys or neighboring organs At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, after getting warm, is a common attendant. Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile remedy, which acts directly upon the parts effected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense itching, and effecting a permanent cure. Price 50 cents. Address The Dr. Bosanko Medicine Co., Piqua, O. Sold by J. W. Conn.

A CARD.

To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c, I will send a recipe that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. This great remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to the REV. JOSEPH T. INMAN, Station D, New York City.
