There is no city of its size in Oregon, Washington territory and I may add, California, of which I have any knowl-edge, that has so good a record for quiet and order as ours. This is due largely to the efficiency of our police forces and to the orderly character of our people. And when it is borne in mind that this is the gateway of Oregon, the point of arrival and departure for the dwellers of a great scope of country, the fact is re-markable that in a seaport town the rec-ord of good behavior is so creditable. Pilot Neill reports that while the schooner Norway was being towed out, about nine o'clock last Thursday morning and while the vessel and tug were abreast of the upper end of Sand Island, the captain of the schooner fell overboard. The tug immediately slowed down and the crew manned a boat to rescue him; the schooner's boat also put off. The captain was flung a hen coop which buoyed him up till a boat got to him and took him aboard. The schooner was then towed back about two miles, when the captain's wife, who had assumed charge, said everything was all right and to take the vessel to sea, which was done.
