The O. R. & N. Lease. Can any one familiar with the policy of the Union Pacific since it passed out of the control of Jay Gould, and its stock ceased to be kicked around Wall street like a toot-ball, and the company's business came under the management of Mr. Charles Francis Adams, doubt that its affairs will be administered in the interests of the people of the states and territories with which it has such important relations! Mr. Adams having received his training largely as one of the railroad commission established by Massachusetts in 1860, in which capacity having scarcely more power than to observe the workings of railroads and to report the same, yet was strong enough, through his ability alone, to be of great service, not only to other states, but to railroads as well, brought his experience and views gained from his standpoint as state commissioner to a practical appli-cation in the management of the affairs of the Union Pacific, changing in many respects reprehensible methods theretofore in practice and exercising a decisive influence on other connecting roads It would be fortunate for Oregon if such a man could control a continuous line fron Portland or Astoria (for if this lease is authorized the road will undoubtedly. and of necessity, be extended to Astoria) to Omaha, for it would be an earnest that the entire interests of the state, so far as a just and wise administration could affect them, would be guarded against any disadvantages which San Francisco and Puget sound now, or may hereafter, obtain through the influence of the Southern Pacific and Northern Pacific respectively.
