Men of Coarse Fibre Get Along Best.

It seems a pity to say it, but observation sustains the statement that men of coarse fibre, obtuseness of feeling and cold-headed circumspection in dealing with their fellows, get along better than men of chivalrous instincts, delicate sensibilities and Heart disease is developed by modern civilization, and is increasing to an alarming extent. Let him who suspects the existence of this cause of sudden death tale this remedy at once—it will cure you. $1.50. Descriptive treatise with each bottle or mailed from that generous credulity which those practice who, never meditating wrong themselves, never suspect it in others. The gentleman in the best acceptance of that term, finds Jordan an embarrassing road to travel, and often sighs to be at the end of his journey. He is annoyed by impertment inquis-itiveness, saddened by meanness, and often robbed by rascals who have taken his measure as the hawk does of some gentler bird it selects for prey. The public men in the country who have had a high code of ethics have been constantly misunderstood. The rough and ready class will not understand reserve, and the schemers and scamps laugh at honesty. Even in the very domestic circle too fine a sense of the proprie ties misses its mark, and society only recognizes surface manners. It does not care to go deeper. In fact, it dare not do so. It is a melancholy thing that the man who educates his children as nearly as possible to an ideal plane of thought and conduct, simply prepares them for sorrow and mishaps. What a transition from the ingenuous, confiding and noble-spirited young man of twenty-one and the sobered and hardened man of fifty, who has seen all illusions trampled in the mire. Still, for all this, it is better to aim high, live purely and sincerely, and, even at the cost of isolation, preserve your own soul from stigms and stain. Even the world does late justice over the graves of those who had the courage to speak | and act the truth. - Pittsburg Chronicle.
