THAT TERRIBLE NORTH COAST.

Shipwreck and Suffering of Hapless Mariners.
David Lowe, a seaman on the bark Thomas R. Foster, which vessel was wrecked on Vancouver Island, has arrived in San Francisco and tells the story of the wreck. He shipped at Port Townsend last December. The ship sailed from Esquimalt December 9th. There were eighteen people on board all told, the captain, two mates, carpenter, cook, cabin boy, and twelve seamen, six in each watch. When the vessel sailed a heavy sea was running outside, and she experienced a succession of gales. Heavy seas were shipped, the cargo shifted and the vessel became waterlogged and lay on her beam ends. The pumps were worked with all possible industry to keep her afloat. After four days and nights of pumping the vessel was run ashore. This occurred December 18th. At about 4 p. m. a hidden rock was struck. The vessel was broadside on. The crew went ashore in a small boat through the breakers, and in about an hour all were landed. They had for provisions half a box of tea, one box of soda crackers and thirty tins of stuff, including sardines, pig's feet, peaches, apples, mince-meat, etc. The vessel was then full of water and breaking up. The landing was effected in a wild and desolate place.

"The next day the captain said if a party went up north they would be sure to find Indians. The second mate and three men started to walk north on Sunday. We divided our stock of provisions, and they took two tins of peaches and twenty-five soda crackers each with them. Two days afterward they returned. They had traveled twenty miles and come to a high bluff covered with brush and could go no further, so they came back. They staid in camp all night. Next day the second mate and three men, myself among them, started southward to endeavor to make Cape Beale. It was snowing and very cold, and we had no shelter and few clothes, and had canvas wrapped round our feet in place of shoes. We took five tins of food along, including one tin of pig's feet. Three sacks of flour washed ashore, and in an old tin pan that floated ashore we baked some cakes and took them with us. We got mussels off the rocks, and if it were not for them we should have starved to death. The day after we left we came to a deserted Indian fishing camp, where the Indians came to fish in summer. It was on the point of an inlet. We walked three days to the head of the inlet when we came to a fresh water river that we could not cross. We went back down the inlet again and build a raft of loose wood, tying it together with the strings of our bundles. We then started to paddle across the inlet, and when half-way the raft broke adrift, and we all got astride of one log and paddled ashore to where we started. We came back to the fishing camp and found two catamaran fashion, and after waiting five or six days for fine weather, started across the inlet, a distance of twenty miles. One hundred yards from shore heavy rollers came over us, and the canoes went down stern first and we had to swim for our lives. Two men then returned to the camp and told our comrades we could not cross the inlet. Then there was some growling, and all the grub was divided up into eighteen parts, each man getting his share and intending to seek his own salvation. Eight men came to us from the camp, making ten in our party then. We went one day's walk up the inlet and built three rafts, two to carry four men and one two men. The inlet was six miles across. We made paddles and at daylight started across. I was on the small raft with another man. We saw the two rafts, as we thought, being carried to sea, so we paddled against the current, got to the fresh water river and got across. The two rafts got stuck ashore on some rocks in the middle of the channel. At noon the men on the rock saw two canoes with Indians coming out in the inlet to fish."

The Indians succored them, and Father Nicolay, a Catholic priest, had them go in five canoes to Clayoquot. There they stayed forty-three days, being well cared for and carried to Victoria by the steamer Sir James Douglass, which had been sent to their relief.

TIRED OF MARRIED LIFE.

But His Trick to Get Away Failed to Work.
Chicago News.
The following dispatch is published from Winnipeg: "A mysterious murder occurred here yesterday morning. C. A. Schofield, bookkeeper for McMillan Bros., flour mill owners, was at work until a late hour Saturday night, posting his books. Schofield was not at home yesterday and search was instituted. Investigation showed that he had been murdered at his desk. The furniture in the office was broken and covered with blood, showing that a struggle had taken place. A trail of blood led to a hole in the ice of the river, and it is supposed that the body had been thrown into the hole after the murder. About $100 had been taken from the safe. A dirk covered with blood was found near the river. Schofield was thirty-five years old, and leaves a young wife. Miller, the night watchman, has been arrested, but protests his innocence. The river is being dragged for the body."
Schofield is now in a cell in the Minneapolis lockup. A detective went out to Rogers station, on the Manitoba train on which, according to a Winnipeg dispatch, the assassin of Schofield was supposed to be. He was arrested, brought here, and a roll of Canadian currency amounting to $2,045, taken from his pocket. The prisoner then astonished the detective by remarking:

"I am the man supposed to have been murdered. I went to the office Saturday night and slaughtered two chickens, scattering their blood over the furniture, and afterwards took them to the river and dumped them through the ice. The money is all my own, except $67. I resorted to this method to escape from domestic trouble."

The Western Settler's Chosen Specific.
With every advance of civilization into the far West, a new demand is created for Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Newly populated regions are frequently less salubrious than older settled localities, on account of the miasma which rises from recently cleared land, particularly along the banks of rivers that are subject to freshets. The agricultural or mining emigrant soon learns, when he does not already know, that the Bitters afford the only sure protection against malaria, and those disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, to which climate changes, exposure, and unaccustomed or unhealthy water or diet subject him. Consequently, he places an estimate upon this great household specific and preventive commensurate with its intrinsic merits, and is careful to keep on hand a restorative and promoter of health so implicitly to be relied upon in time of need.

TAKE
SIMMONS
LIVER REGULATOR
For all Diseases of the Liver, Kidneys, Stomach and Spleen.

This purely vegetable preparation, now so celebrated as a Family Medicine, originated in the South in 1828. It acts gently on the Bowels and Kidneys and corrects the action of the Liver, and is, therefore, the best preparatory medicine, whatever the sickness may prove to be. In all common diseases it will, unassisted, by any other medicine, effect a speedy cure.
The Regulator is safe to administer in any condition of the system, and under no circumstances can it do harm. It will invigorate like a glass of wine, but is no intoxicating beverage to lead to intemperance; will promote digestion, dissipate headache, and generally tone up the system. The dose is small, not unpleasant, and its virtues undoubted.
No loss of time, no interruption or stoppage of business while taking the Regulator.
Children complaining of Colic, Headache, or Sick Stomach, a teaspoonful or more will give relief.
If taken occasionally by patients exposed to MALARIA, it will expel the poison and protect them from attack.
A PHYSICIAN'S OPINION.
I have been practicing medicine for twenty years, and have never been able to put up a vegetable compound that would, like Simmons' Liver Regulator, promptly and effectively move the Liver to action, and at the same time aid (instead of weakening) the digestive and assimilative powers of the system.
