

The Daily Astorian.

ASTORIA, OREGON: FRIDAY, APRIL 22, 1887

The barkentine Portland is discharging a big lot of California hay at the Main street wharf.

The Oregon came in yesterday. The State left out. The Glenfarg crossed out on her way to the Sound, where she will load lumber.

"A soap mine has been discovered in Clackamas county." That's nothing. N. Clinton has discovered a yeast powder mine at Bay View.

The Presbyterian social at Mrs. Geo. C. Flavel's last evening was largely attended and greatly enjoyed by the ladies and gentlemen present.

The salvation army has rented the building opposite G. A. Stinson's blacksmith shop, and contemplate beginning operations next week.

There is a man named Mutch in the state penitentiary who claims to know where $1,800 is buried in Astoria, but he won't tell any one, and says he will come down here and get it himself when his time expires.

Large flocks of geese flying very high, flew northwesterly yesterday. Man, who jibes at the humble geese, is not so dextrous in the three elements. In water we sink, in air we tumble, on earth we stumble, while the geese is at home in all three.

The sealing schooners Otter and Mary Taylor are reported outside, busy catching seals about twenty miles off the mouth of the river. The seals seldom come in so close or stay so long, but the schooners report a very good catch this year, the seals ranging as far south as Tillamook head.

Immense quantities of Oregon and Washington wheat and flour are being shipped from San Francisco. The Columbia took nearly 20,000 sacks of wheat, and over 2,000 bbls flour. The State took another large lot. Under different commercial conditions this food shipment would be made from Astoria. Sometime it will be.

There will be a children's sociable at the residence of Mrs. Capt. Reed this afternoon, from half-past three o'clock until seven. During the evening the sociable will be continued for the pleasure of the young gentlemen and ladies. Cake and ice cream will be sold. The proceeds will be given for the benefit of the Episcopal Sunday school.

The interstate commerce law has had the effect of increasing the freight overland, on a case of Columbia river salmon, from 38 cents to 43 cents a case. It has paralyzed the wool industry of eastern Oregon by occasioning a prohibitory tariff. There is a grave in Pike county, Missouri and over that grave is a stone and on that stone is the legend: "Here lies the mortal remains of Joseph Bowers; he was well; he would be better; he took medicine—and here he is."

Talking of the Oregon governors yesterday, Mr. John Hobson recalled some interesting reminiscences. Of Governor Gaines, he said he came down here in the spring of '51 and bought his (Hobson's) farm from him. That summer, the governor's wife was killed by a runaway horse on the Skippam bridge, and the following autumn Governor Gaines sold back the farm to Mr. Hobson. He died in 1854 and is buried near Salem. A few years after his son came down and exhuming the remains of his mother from the Clatsop burying ground had them conveyed beside those of his father.

Astonishing Success.

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 80,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about it. Sample bottles to try sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in the United States and Canada.

AN INTERESTING LETTER.

Views of an Astorian Traveling in Europe.

VIENNA, March 23, 1887.

EDITOR ASTORIAN:

In Berlin are many English-speaking people. At the hotels and railway stations there is always someone who can speak this language, and at the hospitals there are so many Americans I have no chance to practice my German. I was surprised one day on the streets, while trying to enquire for a certain street, in German, to have the man answer me in good English, and one who thinks he is the only one understanding English here, frequently makes himself ridiculous. I had a friend in Berlin who was a great admirer of Mark Twain, and often spoke of the blunder this writer speaks of having made in Paris, when, with a friend, he was criticizing the different persons they met, and finally praised a young lady's appearance who happened to be English, and who kindly thanked him, but asked him to not be quite so public in his remarks. My friend tried to imitate this blunder, and whenever he met a lady who was sure to hear him, he would at once and in a loud voice, speak in glowing terms of her beauty. He had no success, however, until one day in perfect innocence, he exclaimed: "By Jove, Docter, just look at those monstrous feet!" Of course I looked, but just in time to see a lady give my friend the most withering glance that a woman was capable of, and which he will never forget, I am sure. Then, elevating her nose to the angle of about ninety degrees, she sailed down the street. My friend does not try to imitate Mark Twain any more. Another friend walked into a beer hall and said: "Look at that girl; she is as homely as mud;" whereupon she said: "I ain't either, you mean, hateful, old thing."

In nothing has my disappointment been greater than the famous Gretchen of the poets, artists and romance writers. I was about as anxious

TO SEE A REAL, LIVE GRETCHEN

When coming to this country, as I had been to see the castles and cathedrals. Since seeing many of them I have lost faith in the judgment of poets and writers; for of all the Gretchen I have seen, not one was pretty. They all wear short dresses; are fat, short in stature, have big feet, wear red stockings, and are between forty and fifty years old; and if there are any handsome ones in Germany, I failed to find them. Leaving Berlin, I came to Vienna, where I am writing this letter. This city is the great resort for doctors, and no American doctor coming to Europe to study considers his education complete without having spent part of his time here. Here is the largest hospital in the world, containing about three thousand patients, three hundred nurses and about two hundred physicians on the medical staff. There are Americans here

FROM EVERY STATE IN THE UNION.

They furnish the money which gives this place its reputation, and are so numerous I meet them everywhere.

This is an interesting city, consisting of the old and new portions. In the old are the old imperial buildings and the famous "Graeben." The new part has the finest streets and most magnificent buildings I have yet seen. The city is full of cafes where the best of beer and coffee can be obtained. There are numerous saloons in Astoria and are always full of students and soldiers, the first spending the most of the first three years of college life here. Vienna is said to be the fastest city in Europe, and judging from what I have seen, I think this must be true, the life of the natives who can afford it being one round of parties, balls, ampers and other dissipations. It seems that the eastern vices are grafted on the western dissipation, producing a society, the morals of which will not bear close, or even superficial investigation. Their concert halls are very numerous, and are crowded every night, and an evening spent in such a place is to an American, a rare treat, for he sees nothing like it at home. These buildings have large halls and galleries containing hundreds of tables where one may get a good meal, drink his beer or wine, smoke a cigar, see a good drama, listen to delicious music and, if inclined, talk to the handsomest women in the world—Astoria excepted—all at one and the same time, in this respect Vienna combining all the pleasures of life until one is ahead of the world. The opera here is also said to be the best in the world, not even excepting Dresden. One evening spent in listening to Lohengrin in their magnificent opera house, convinced me that this must be true also; for sweeter music, grander orchestra and chorus and better stage scenery one never listened to or saw with the exception of Patti and Nilson's singing and Irving's stage effects. The women of Vienna have the reputation of being the handsomest in existence. They certainly are glorious looking creatures, and many Americans, who had not been in Astoria, go wild when they first come here—lose their appetites, neglect their studies and write poetry for two or three weeks, until they become accustomed to the surroundings. However, I have not heard of one taking a Viennese bride home with him. They are too loyal, I think, to home and native land to do anything of this kind. By the way, the American women have a reputation, in every country in which I have been, of being handsome, the most intelligent, and the best dressed women of the world; and it is said you can

FROM A FIRST CLASS OPERA,

RECOGNIZE AN AMERICAN LADY

In a crowd of Europeans by her dress and independent air. My experience is too limited to give an opinion on this subject, but will say that I have yet to see the women, or men either, that are the equals of the American, in any respect, and am sure none are their superiors.

There are thirty thousand soldiers in Vienna, and the poorest looking lot I have seen any where. Their uniforms are cheap and slouchy looking; they have no style, and when they march or drill look and move about as if half asleep. Perhaps they would not appear so inferior to me if I had not been in Germany, whose soldiers are the finest looking, with the neatest uniforms of any European soldiers I have seen. When I see the immense number of soldiers here I can not help thinking of our little army of twenty-five thousand, or of the standing army of the Sandwich Islands which consists of sixty men all told. And when I think of the immense amount of money required for the support of these large armies and of the sacrifice and suffering entailed upon the people, I long for the time to come when we may say to the soldiers of every nation and clime: "Soldier sleep, thy warfare o'er," etc.

BEFORE CLOSING THIS LETTER I MUST SAY THAT THE WORLD IS

APPARENTLY GROWING SMALLER

For one cannot now go far enough to get away from his own people. I have met every day here and in Germany in the hotels, on the cars or on the streets Americans who are almost known to me, for they know my friends in Astoria, Portland, or somewhere else in America. Consequently one must conduct himself properly or else when he returns home his friends will already have heard of any scrapes he may have been in while in this land. Think how exasperating when one is out on a lark and imagines he is so far from home he will never be found out, to have some one slap him on the shoulder and say: "Hello, Jones, is this you? How is my old friend Jenks in Astoria? Any word you want to send home? I will be in your town in a few weeks." This is humiliating, but just what one must expect here. Consequently the traveler learns to conduct himself just as properly here as at home. Otherwise he had best not return home, for some one would be sure to meet him there who had known him in Europe. But probably he had as well go home as anywhere, for

NO MATTER WHERE HE GOES

He will meet some one who knew him in his travels, or at least knew some one else that did, who had been particular in telling of every scrape he had been in, or improper act he thought of doing, while away from home. Yesterday I met a gentleman from California, and a few days ago one from Portland. Consequently I am as decorous as a deacon on Sunday. I am beginning to long to see that little town which is built in the grandest state, situated at the mouth of the noblest river, and whose inhabitants are the most sociable and best natured, political and otherwise, I have ever met. I long to see Astoria, and when I pack my valise again it will be to buy a through ticket for the land I love the best.

Madame Trebelli, the greatest of living contraltos who has traveled extensively, in fact visited every county and city of note in the world, has just departed from the slope of the Pacific, and often expressing the greatest admiration for the beauty and grandeur of our scenery and the delightful mildness of our climate, left the following written note as a living expression of her opinion in the hands of a Portland druggist, the original of which can be seen on demand.
