The weather for the past five weeks holds back all kinds of business, more especially all businesses connected with the fishing industry. The boats can't make the usual lower grounds, and if there the squalls drive them back. Fortunately, though capsizing have been numerous, there has, so far, been very little loss of life.

Of Col Woodford, who is to arrive here to-morrow, the Boston Messen- ger says: "From all along the line of Mr. Woodford's route, come stirring reports of interest aroused and stimulated, and good work done. Some of the no-nonsense victories obtained in Berkshire county and other parts of the state are due in great measure to his able and convincing addresses."

A schooner captain who needed some men to fill out his crew, went to Portland a few days ago and engaged two men there, paying their fares to this city. When they got here they refused to ship and when threatened to have them arrested, they laughed at him and told him to go ahead. The captain will probably read up on the interstate commerce bill.

On her last trip down the river, when at Walker's Island, the Manzanita crew spied a deer swimming across the river. A boat was lowered and the deer gathered in out of the wet. He was made a pet of at once, and a collar and other adornments were rigged up and placed upon the frightened fawn of the forest. When off Tongue Point he was released, and gaining the shore in safety, he bounded lightly away and was soon lost to sight in the sylvan glades.

W. F. Smith and Geo. Achey, the captain and crew of the stanch craft Dashing Ware, chartered for the season by the Aberdeen Packing Co., yesterday had a narrow escape from a sailor's grave in the heaving waters of the lower Columbia, their vessel tipping over at five o'clock and throwing the entire force into the yeasty waves near Irawoo wharf. Assistance was close at hand, and W. F. was soon in dryer quarters. Geo. waded his hand gaily to the shore and walked the keel of the submerged craft as she was towed swiftly to the beach.

It is reported, says the Oregonian, that parties representing the Union Pacific railway, or "sitting close to the throne," are now in the city trying to buy the sawmill property of the Holladay estate, more familiarly known as Weidler's mill. The property includes four or five blocks, which, it is said, the Union Pacific desires as a freight yard. These blocks would give considerable room on this side, in addition to the ground owned by the Northern Pacific Terminal company, and would be a good investment on general principles. As a rule, railroads do not engage in the enterprise of cutting lumber, but the Union Pacific is the largest purchaser in this market and it would not be surprising if the company would find it profitable to own a mill. The last purchase of the company in this market was over a million ties, which cost them $227,000. About five years ago the Northern Pacific railway officials made an offer of something like $240,000 for the property, but Joe Holladay was not able to give a legal title.

A communication from Gill & Clifton was read and referred to the street committee. A communication from the board of delegates of the fire department was read and placed on file, and, on motion, the committee on fire and water was instructed to advertise for bids for the construction of a pipe line along Genevieve street.

The report of police judge for March was reported correct by committee on health and police; report adopted.

The report of the committee on health and police on communication of Jos. Shinnott, recommending that the committee be authorized to investigate the matter, was read, and, on motion, adopted.

The following claims were ordered paid: Astoria Gaslight Co., $132.20; Electric Light Co., $156; N. Clinton, $125; Ross & Wirt, $248; B. Gallagher, $12.

On motion the auditor and police judge was instructed to give legal notice that Hemlock and Cedar streets in Shively's Astoria, east of West 6th street, are in a dangerous condition, and that the members of the council will not be responsible for any accident that may occur by traveling over said streets.

On motion the committee on fire and water were instructed to advertise for bids for moving the engine house of Astoria Engine Co., No. One to the end of Concomly street on the east side of Main street.

On motion council adjourned.

ENTOMBED IN THE MINE.

The Terrible Disaster at Nanaimo, B. C.

NANAIMO, B. C., May 4.—At this hour (2 P. M.) but little hope is entertained for the safety of the imprisoned men. Fire is still raging, but it is thought it will soon be gotten under control. The rescuing party will again attempt to go below.

All this day gangs of men have been engaged in strenuous efforts to subdue the flames in the No. 1 shaft, and at 11 A. M. it was thought they had the flames under control. The Merryweather steam fire engine is doing good work pumping water from the harbor down the shaft, the hand fire engine having been taken down the mine, where it is fighting the fire from the level.

It is impossible to make an attempt to get at the imprisoned men until the fire is subdued, for by so doing it would drive the gas on to the fire and cause a second disaster.

There is but little hope of saving the men alive, but an effort will be made at the first possible moment to reach the imprisoned miners. Over one-half of the dead, injured and imprisoned men leave wives and families to mourn their untimely end.

At 9 P. M. great advances have been made in subduing the flames, and it is now thought the fire is confined to a small portion of the level between the main and air shafts. From present appearances the fire in the air shaft itself is entirely out.

The expectation is that the fire will be extinguished by daylight this morning. Instantly the fire is out, the work of carrying air into the workings will be proceeded with, and the impression is that by to-morrow evening the full extent of the disaster will be ascertained.

Julius Michael, one of the injured, stated that he was sitting in the cabin at supper in No. 2 shaft. He felt a concussion, when all scrambled out. He became insensible, and was the only one saved of his four companions, whose dead bodies came up in the cage with him. Several handsy springs to the miraculously escape.

Springing to the dazed feeling which characterized all who came out from the deadly pit. Only 150 yards from the entrance to the shaft Michael represents the explosion as something terrific, when all became darkness.

John Lynch, badly injured about the face and hands, and hip fractured, has been in dementia all day, his talk being of work in the pit. It is thought he will not recover, owing to inhaling gas. The others were not injured seriously, though all were badly shaken up.

Samuel Hudson's heroic death is unaccountable. He was a miner of great experience, while those who went down with him to rescue their fellows were comparatively inexperienced. He died from the effects of after damp. His brave deed is one of the brightest things in this carnival of misery.

Fears are entertained that the whole place may be blown up, and old miners say such a result is possible. If so, the catastrophe would be the greatest recorded in the history of coal mining.

All hope of rescuing anyone in the mines was long ago abandoned. All that men can do is being done to reach them. It was thought first of cutting a ditch to salt water, so as to attempt to put out the fire in No. 2 shaft by turning a stream of water into it, but the scheme was abandoned. It would only flood the mine, rendering it practically useless for a year, and would banish any hope that might have been entertained of saving the lives of the men.

The mines extend out from the shore more than a mile beneath the waters of the harbor, and as one looks over the placid waves he cannot imagine that beneath them are imprisoned many dead, the fathers and sons of eighty families of this little city. Around the shaft the scenes are harrowing in the extreme. As each cage came up anxious faces looked for glad tidings that never came, and hope also soon to be dispelled by the truth that there is no prospect for the dear ones who died at their post of duty.

Mr. Ryder and Mr. Scott, of the Wellington mines, went down this afternoon, at the imminent risk of their lives, in an endeavor to make an investigation as to the manner of procedure. Mr. Chandler, of the Wellington mine, has been indefatigable in his efforts to assist in the work of rescue. Indeed, everybody seems possessed with a desire to labor heroically in the arduous and dangerous work.

Grief-stricken women tore their hair in agony of sorrow, and with babes at their bosoms continued to walk up and down, mourning their losses. Many are demoralized and feel that they should go into the cage to find their loved ones.

One-half the dead and imprisoned men leave wives and families to mourn their untimely end.

It is believed late to-night that the fire in the air shaft has been extinguished, and that a small body of flame exists between the air and main shaft, which will probably be conquered to-morrow, when an attempt will be made to bring air in and the work of rescue will begin. By to-morrow night it is hoped the men will be reached.

One woman in conversation to-night lamented the loss of husband, father and brother, her all. She had given up all hope and only prayed to see her dead husband once more. This is only one of many cases.

A black pall hangs over the city. Business houses are all closed, the collieries shut up and the entire population gathered at the scene of the disaster. Broken-hearted wives, terror-stricken children and sorrowing fathers hover in the vicinity and mourn their terrible affliction. Like Rachael of old, they refuse to be comforted. Even the skies seem to share in the general grief, for they have been somber and leaden colored all day, occasional showers of rain causing a dreariness over the already ghastly scene. The imprisoned miners were all old settlers. Their faces were familiar on the streets and there will be many a void in the homes of the people when the terrible tale is told that they are dead. It is almost impossible that any can have survived, though many have that hope deferred which maketh the heart sick. People do not yet begin to realize the extent of the calamity. When the excitement has passed away the reaction will be terrible. The nature of the explosion is of course unknown. It is generally supposed to be an explosion of coal dust similar to that on the Queen of the Pacific. The tale will never be told.

Astonishing Success. It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 80,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about it. Sample bottles to try sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers, in the United States and Canada.

Card of Thanks. We wish to thank the fishermen of the Anglo American Packing company for the receipt of the reward of $25 they offered for the recovery of the body of the late Chas. Johnson. M. WILSON. W. H. ELLRY.
