Shingle socials are the latest in that line.

A pet bear of the male persuasion beguiles the leisure of the Manzanita's crew.

The whaler Alliance, formerly the Emma Hume, is reported sold to parties in Mexico.

The Arcton was loading at Kinney's dock yesterday, taking on tin, lumber, boxes, etc., for Alaska.

The Clara Parker starts with freight for logging camps at nine this morning, for John Day's, Gnat creek and Knappa.

It is expected that the steamer Mexico, sunk on that terrible north coast, will be raised and brought to San Francisco in about a month.

The Arcton has finished discharging 7,651 boxes tin plate, the duty on which is about $8,230. She has 800 tons salt, some coal, coke and crockery, still aboard.

Capt. Robertson, of the bark J. W. Sawyer, bound from San Francisco to Astoria, had wrecked on the California coast, reports that while the wreck of his vessel was on New Year's Point, plunderers stole clothing and everything of value that they could find.

The Bancroft History company state that the 14 Oregon reports of the supreme court, which they have been publishing, will be ready for delivery by May 20th. The type for the work is nearly all up. This company is also publishing Hill's annotated code, which is nearing completion.

Order has been established in San Francisco by the Ship Owners' Association increasing the wages of coasting sailors. The rates established are $45 per month to open ports, $40 to bar harbors and Puget sound and $35 to the Hawaiian islands. This schedule is $5 higher all around than the standard which the Coast Seamen's Union have been demanding for a long period.

The Columbia came in yesterday morning, with a very large list of passengers and a very small list of freight, and a slight list to starboard as she swung into the dock looming up above the Oregon, which, deeply laden, started seaward at eleven a. m. The latter took 556 cases salmon; 250 Seaside; 200 Geo. W. Hume; 116, Eureka, Heliance brand. She sails at ten this morning.

Well Dressed Shop Girls.

Our shop girls are considerably ahead of the servants in the art of providing themselves with clothes. Betting is sinful as well as uncertain, but if it were not I would wager a cart wheel dollar against a little green apple that ours are the cutest as well as the most graceful and prettiest shop girls in America, writes a New York correspondent of the Providence Journal. I am so confident of this that I will lend the doll to any one who will make the bet. They dress so well that strangers are forever suspecting ill of their characters. The idea of thinking ill of a girl who gets up at daybreak to crack the ice in the pitcher for her morning's wash, and then works until dark for from $3 to $5 a week! If that is not a certificate of good character, let me know what is, please.

But our shop girls can do more with their pennies in the way of dress than many women of means do with their dollars. You show the average New York shop girl what the fashion is, the latest dress pattern or hat shape or style of trimming or drapery or manner of wearing a thing, and then see if she won't have "it to a T" next Sunday. The girls who work behind the counters in our ladies' shopping stores number about 15,000. They learn all the tricks of beating the devil of fashion around the stump of economy. They learn all the arts and artifices of the women they wait on, and all the subtleties and saving devices of their associates behind the counters.

Every night, like the carrier-doves that flew from beleaguered Paris, they scatter far and wide, retailing their discoveries and experiments among their friends of the factories and tenements and sewing rooms and telephone centers, and of wherever else women are who have not these chances of staying fashion. These girls handle all sorts of stuff, learn first of every bargain sale, and, imitating expensive goods with cheap ones, so as to produce the effects their richer sisters aim at, they have every advantage by being in the very sanctums and service of fashion; but above all else is their taste. They can fit themselves or each other as well as ever a modiste molded a duchess, and when their clothes are on them they invest their very buttons and bustles with a chic and pride of bearing that money never yet has bought.

FATAL ACCIDENT YESTERDAY.

Slipped From the Roof to Instant Death.

The Remains to be Taken to Salem Monday

A shocking accident occurred at Holt & McCurtree's carpenter shop on Jefferson street, next door to the M. E. church yesterday morning, resulting in the almost instant death of Ben Strang, a well known resident of Salem and this city.

Repairs had been going on on the roof of the building, and a tin cap, 25 inches wide and 27 feet long, was to be nailed on.

The tin cap was partially done, about ten o'clock, when, in some way, the unfortunate man slipped on the wet shingles, rain falling at the time, and was hurled headlong from the roof. He fell head downward, and struck on his head on the railing that runs along the walk on the west side of the M. E. church, from there he glanced, again striking one of the caps of the building and falling into the water below.

Fred Davidson, Coroner Ross, Frank Surprenant, Officer Rucker, and others saw the fall and immediately hurried to the spot, and in a very few minutes the body was got out of the water. Examination showed that while it was impossible for him to drown during the short time he was in the water, life was extinct, his neck being broken, and the head swinging loosely on the broken column.

The body was brought to the coroner's undertaking rooms and the news quickly spreading caused universal expression of sympathy.

Deceased was a well known resident of Salem, and had resided at various times in this city. He was a brother of Pilot Jas. Strang and a brother-in-law of E. R. Hawes. He was about 50 years of age, and leaves a wife and four daughters; the oldest daughter, Mrs. Condit, lives in Los Angeles; the remainder of the family reside in Salem. The remains, accompanied by his brother and other members of the family, will be taken to Salem to-morrow, for interment.

The Electric Current Killed Him.

New York, May 6.—Mr. Simpson, night engineer of the Adams Express Company at 41 Trinity Place, took a friend named Helme into the cellar last night, promising him that he would see some tall handling of dynamo wire. "Electricity doesn't affect me much any more," said Simpson. "What would knock you out in a second I can hold without turning a muscle." Down in the basement Simpson explained about the two currents and the dynamo, and urged Helme to try a small electric shock. Helme said he didn't know much about wires and such things, and that he had better stay away from them. Simpson then braced himself and started in. He took one wire first with one hand and then with both hands. There was no damage done apparently, and the foolhardy engineer then seized both wires, putting one hand on each. No sooner had he fairly touched them than the lights went suddenly out. Simpson's arms stretched straight out and he fell heavily to the floor and died instantly from the electric shock.

Famous Women.

Madame Trebelli, the greatest of living contraltos who has traveled extensively, in fact visited every county and city of note in the world, has just departed from the slope of the Pacific, and often expressing the greatest admiration for the beauty and grandeur of our scenery and the delightful mildness of our climate, left the following written note as a living expression of her opinion in the hands of a Portland druggist, the original of which can be seen on demand.

Portland, Or., April 6, 1887.
Dear Mr. Widdow:—I have tried your "Robertine," and it gives me much pleasure to say that it is excellent for the complexion, being one of the best articles of the kind I have ever used. Believe me, yours sincerely,
Z. TREBELLI.

If any further proof of the excellence of this article is required call on Messrs. W. E. Dement & Co. of Astoria, Or., who, for the small sum of fifty cents, will produce evidence that will satisfy the most skeptical and fastidious and give you a beautiful picture card for the trouble of enquiring.

TEMPERANCE AT LIBERTY HALL.

Lecture There Last Evening by Col. Woodford.

Col. Woodford began a series of temperance discourses at Liberty Hall last evening under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. The proceedings opened at eight o'clock with a few preliminary remarks, the singing of a hymn, and the reading from the bible by the speaker of the evening of the scene described in the New Testament, where Christ is said to have miraculously fed the multitude on five barley loaves and two fishes. The speaker dwelt with emphasis on the statement that "the fragments filled twelve baskets." He thought that was a lesson of severe economy; that the gathering up of the fragments, the solicitude displayed for the broken bread, the torn fishes, was in answer to the admonition "Waste makers want." Wherever there was found waste there would be found want, the greater the waste the greater the want. The one was always the proportionate result of the other. This doctrine of Christ's that the fragments be gathered up, was, to the speaker, one of Christ's ways of convincing the multitude that he was the Messiah.

Here Col. Woodford, who has a fine baritone voice, asked the audience to stand and sing

"Pass me not, Oh gentle Saviour, Hear my humble cry."

Which they did, the soprano of the ladies in the front harmonizing with the bass of the bulk of the audience.

Rev. J. T. McCormack then introduced Col. Woodford, who prefaced his remarks by saying he had been in Southern California, where everyone got inside when they saw a rain cloud in the sky; he had been in Iowa where settlers hunted their cyclone pits at the first gust of wind and he was glad to be in a country where people weren't afraid of the elements and where they turned out to hear a lecturer even if the evening was a little damp.

As he came in at the entrance to the river this morning he saw a magnificent sight, one of the finest elements in the scene of beauty that lay before his delighted vision being a numerous fleet of boats, each manned by two hardy fishermen. On seeing them his first impression was that they earned every dollar they got; his second impression was that if there was any calling that had been dignified as an avocation it was that of a fisherman, for Christ had rebuked the Scribes and Pharisees and said to fishermen "Follow Me."

The speaker then went into the discussion of "the three W's," "Work, Wages and Wittels," as it was styled by a practical philanthropist. With the majority, life was a struggle for something to eat. "Work, Wages and Whisky," seemed to be "the three W's," to judge of the way many men spent their money. How the time was spent from Saturday night to Monday morning would furnish the index to a man's life. It isn't how much a man earns; it is how he spends his earnings.

The Knights of Labor, through their head man Powderly, had come squarely out in opposition to the liquor traffic, and if the organized churches that call themselves Christian would do as the Knights of Labor had done, there wouldn't be a saloon in the United States in five years.

He drew a striking picture of two men, the one spending his earnings in making home happy; the other unable to withstand temptation and lured to squander his money on others who only cared to have him spend it. If any of his statements were challenged he wanted it understood that the platform was free and he invited dispute. The truth would be made appear. Facts were all that were wanted. He had spent his life with drinking men till ten years ago, and knew what he was talking about.

After a discourse of an hour and forty minutes, he called upon all present to sign the pledge while the audience rose and sang "Hold the Fort."

The colonel is a man of pleasing appearance, a ready talker, intersperses his remarks with wit and amusing anecdotes, strikes straight from the shoulder, knows all about his subject and talks temperance in a temperate way.

Don't Experiment.
You cannot afford to waste time in experimenting when your lungs are in danger. Consumption always seizes at first, only a cold. "FOUND DROWNED."

Cast Up By the Waves at Scarborough Head.

Amid sheets of rain and a driving southwester, the sadly frequent spectacle of a drowned man carried on a rude stretcher, was seen at two o'clock yesterday afternoon. So often is that scene visible in the streets of Astoria as to dull by its frequency the thoughts of the tragic ending of another human life. How they meet their death; whether amid the storm and darkness the hapless occupant is struck by the boom and flung overboard, or whetted by the boat upsata, or ran into a trap in Baker's bay, or in what way the accident occurs, is many times impossible to ascertain. The boat is found on the beach, the net or a part of it is cast ashore, and after a day or a week, sometimes longer, the bruised and battered form of the captain or boat puller is flung on the sand and brought to town by his comrades, who pay him the last sad tribute of respect from the living to the dead, by giving the body decent interment.

The young man whose body was carried into the undertaker's yesterday morning was Wm. Sandell, of the Point Adams cannery. Members of the Columbia River Fisherman's Protective Union say that he was drowned in one of the traps on the Washington territory side in that vicinity. He will be buried by the Union at one o'clock this afternoon.

Astonishing Success.

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 80,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about it. Sample bottles to try sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers, in the United States and Canada.

The Greatest Study of Mankind is Man. The greatest study of mankind is man, and who ere his wondrous fame doth scan.

Ponder and devise to cure an ill, Whether by device, fruit or pill, An equal benefactor is he; and we haste, The inventor of a cathartic of delicious taste, To do him honor.

Who remembers not how the distressed mother, Her child's entreaties tries to smother, That she last not the horrid dose he taken, The remembrance e'en now does nausea awaken, And fond father, To be witness of his child's torture, Would rather pay high price, If money could purchase Cathartic nice.

We have it now! and great DR. PRATT'S name, Appears upon the scroll of Esculapian fame, For after long study what would suit, Has hit upon DELICIOUS FRUIT To cure our ill.

Away at once with draughts and pills; For whether it be indigestion, liver concern, or any ailment, strikes at the root, Or any ailment to which he is heir, He here with pride does boldly declare, And on the assertion will wager big, That it can be cured by a HAMBURG FIG!

Her Nice Bonnet.

They met by chance on Eighth street. Both were out shopping. Each wore a new bonnet, a perfect "dneek" in its way.

Said one: "My dear, that's a lovely bonnet you have on, stylish and becoming. It must have cost you a good deal?" this last interrogatively.

"I think it is rather pretty," rejoins the other modestly, "but it did not cost me more than I usually pay. You know I never spend more than $5 for a bonnet. This only cost me $3.42."

"Mercy!" exclaims the other in unfeigned surprise; "$3.42 for a bonnet like that. I never heard of such a thing. Why, it's every bit as nice as mine—indeed, I think it's prettier—and mine cost me $13, and I thought I was getting it cheap at that. How do you manage things so well, dear?"

"Oh, easy enough. I go to all the openings, see all the new styles and try on such bonnets as I imagine are becoming to me until I find that I am suited. But, mind you, I don't buy. I examine the article closely, get a good idea of just how it is made, ask the price and leave. I then go and buy a bonnet frame for a dollar or so, spend $3, more or less, for trimmings, and make a pretty good copy of the model that pleased me. The bonnet I have on was copied from an $18 one."

"Well, I never!" declared the other; "you are a wonderful manager." Then they went in to look at some ribbons.—Philadelphia Bulletin.
