A Valuable Metal In Demand.

J. H. Fisk, the well-known assayer, is in receipt of a letter from Prof. David Day, of the U. S. geological survey, Washington, D. C., again asking about platinum in this country. He wants to know the location of the precious metal, the amount of production, the manner of getting it out, and all other pertinent information. There is a very large demand for platinum in New York at this time, and the mineral is worth about as much in the market as gold—say $16 to $17 an ounce.

One man at Coos bay secured about fifteen pounds and this has been sent to Prof. Day. There is any quantity of platinum in Coos and Curry counties, but like the gold dust so often mentioned, is mixed with black sand on river banks and the ocean beach, and costs as much as it is worth to separate it. Platinum is also found in some places on the banks of the McKenzie, mixed with sand. Several nuggets of mineral have been found in the Granite creek district in British Columbia, a few miles north of Colville, and specimens which were sent to Prof. Day were pronounced first-class. Should the platinum be found in considerable quantities in this district, the finder, of a verity, will have struck a gold mine.—Oregonian, 7.
