A VETERAN FINANCIER.
The fact that Sidney Dillon was one of the purchasers of the Wheeling & Erie railroad some days ago again calls attention to a financier who has had an interesting career. He is one of the most popular of the moneyed powers of this country. He traces his genealogy back to the Huguenots, if that is a matter of any particular importance in these days of indifference to the isms of sects. Some of his ancestors were Irish, but none of them happened to be kings in the old days when the harp of Erin shed the soul of music in Tara's halls. Sidney Dillon is tall, well built, with snow white hair and whiskers, being now well advanced in years. He used to be a water boy on the Mohawk & Hudson railroad, and worked for $1 a week. In after years he rolled up a fortune of $15,000,000, but he lost heavy in the depreciation in the value of Union Pacific railroad stock. After working industriously as a boy, carrying a water pail to the brawny laborers on the railroad for a number of years and carefully saving his money, as so few do, he was able to buy a horse and cart, and then he carried water and sand for the railroad. He was brought up in the humblest circumstances in the village of Northern New York where he was born, and seeing the wealth and ease of the large farmers in his native place he was filled with a desire to emulate their comfortable prosperity, and not only that but to far outshine them in measures of gold. He worked night and day, he lived frugally; he was a genial fanatic, as bent on conquering the avenues of wealth as Peter the Hermit was on despoiling the infidels of the Holy Land. He was all energy and enterprise, never letting a chance slip whereby his savings might be augmented. In a few years he found himself able to hire or buy a number of horses and carts, and then he struck out in larger enterprises. He gradually secured railroad contracts, which proved very remunerative, and in his thirtieth year, when he married a very estimable lady of Amherst, Mass., he was in prosperous circumstances. This lady greatly aided him by the influence of a very superior nature; his domestic life was at once a source of moral strength and of encouraging stimulus. When he came to New York he devoted himself to railroad contracts; he built the Fourth avenue improvement tunnel, at a cost of millions of dollars. He had previously, however, superintended the building of the Union Pacific railroad, and in 1869 had assisted at the laying of the last rail. His emoluments from this work had laid a broader foundation for a successful career in New York. He was at one time president of the Union Pacific and was succeeded by Charles Francis Adams. He has been a director of Union Pacific, Pacific Mail, Western Union, Missouri Kansas & Texas, Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, Texas Pacific, Manhattan Elevated and the Mercantile Trust Company. At one time he had registered in his own name 45,000 shares of Union Pacific, 15,000 of Western Union and 10,000 of Lackawanna, not to mention his holdings of other stocks. He has done valuable service for Jay Gould, especially in connection with the Union Pacific, years ago, and the "Little Magician" stands by him to-day, though Mr. Dillon is not so powerful financially as in former times. Mr. Dillon's career, nevertheless, illustrates the amazing possibilities open to the poorest in the country.

Want to Save the Lands.
WASHINGTON, May 14.—The assistant attorney-general for the interior department has fixed June 13 for argument of the question that was brought up three years ago before the general land office as to whether the Northern Pacific road possessed a grant of land from the head of Puget sound, at Tacoma, down to Portland, Oregon. The granting act and the charter provided for the building of a line to Puget Sound, with a branch down the Columbia river to Portland. On both these lines grants were given, but the road was built from Puget sound to Portland also, and a question has arisen whether any land was granted to the road for this line. The distance is about 150 miles, and the land involved aggregates about 2,500,000 acres. The overlapping of the grant along the Cascade branch, which is almost at right angles with the Tacoma branch, takes perhaps 1,500,000 acres out of the controversy. An official of the Northern Pacific, who was here last winter, stated that the Cascade branch and the Tacoma division would be a direct route to Portland, when built, and that it would be a good many years before the Columbia river branch would be constructed, and he doubted, even if it were necessary to save the grant on that line, if it would be built. As a consequence the road is very desirous of saving the lands along the line from Tacoma, through Kalama to Portland, as they are very valuable and will form a valuable property, approaching as they do so near the coast.

SAFE, SURE, AND SPEEDY.
No external remedy ever yet devised has so fully and unquestionably met these three prime conditions as successfully as ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS. They are safe because they contain no deleterious drugs and are manufactured upon scientific principles of medicine. They are sure because nothing goes into them except ingredients which are exactly adapted to the purposes for which a plaster is required. They are speedy in their action because their medicinal qualities go right to their work of relieving pain and restoring the natural and healthy performance of the functions of muscles, nerves, and skin.
