Sad accounts of accidents to the fishing fleet come from the mouth of the river. Boat No. One, of the Ocean Canning Company, capsized below the breakwater, about nine last Friday night. The captain, Jno. Reed, was found dead, in the net; the body of the boat puller was not recovered. A boat belonging to the Jas. Williams Co. went ashore about the same time at Sand Island; the men were both saved.

The May foreign exports from the Columbia consist of just one cargo of flour—the same as no shipments at all. The April shipments were also meager. While the April and May shipments are never very great, it being the very last of the grain season, yet there ought to be some clearances of vessels, foreign. That there is not is charged to the recent corner in San Francisco that caused Oregon and Washington grain to be sent from the Columbia in the holds of the passenger steamers, and stored in San Francisco warehouses; not a single grain cargo loading there or in the Columbia river, during May.

A TALK WITH BLAINE.

Yesterday's New York World published an account of a visit made by a correspondent to Mr. Blaine, at his home in Augusta, Maine, and afterwards at his cottage at Bar Harbor, in the course of which Blaine gave fully his plans for his forthcoming trip. He discussed false reports of his failing health, and referred at length to the work he has bestowed on his books just finished. He says his visit abroad will extend over more than a year, and doubtless beyond the time of meeting of the next national convention.

The correspondent asked, "How about the report, Mr. Blaine, that you contemplate in some way visiting Mr. Gladstone and helping the home rule party?" "That story is purely imaginative. I never had such an idea in my mind. No, indeed; I shall do nothing of the kind."

"It has been widely published that your trip to Europe is for the benefit of your health. Is that the case?" "It is very curious about that report. I have been made sick by various newspapers at various times, and first and last have been made to have nearly every malady that I know of. I have had Bright's disease, typhoid fever, torpid liver, affection of the heart, paralysis, nervous debility, and, well, I don't know, but at any rate a good many other diseases. As I said, it is curious how these stories start. I have, in fact, been singularly free from sickness. I have had hardly a sick day in my life; never anything serious, and I never had any organic trouble of any kind."

Mr. Blaine positively declined to talk about politics, except that while in conversation with the correspondent in his cottage at Bar Harbor, he said in regard to the Burchard incident in 1884: "I did not hear what he said, but the reporters heard it, and the next day every paper in the country had it, of course, but as a matter of fact, I did not hear it myself. Why, out in Indiana they had it that I seconded the remark. It went all over the state, and in a good many places in the west they had slips of paper printed with, 'Read what Mr. Blaine says,' on them, and distributed them in front of churches on Sunday. That is what lost me the election. You know, of course, how close it was. Well, in New York city alone it lost me several thousand votes. A good deal more than enough to have carried the state. I have never felt sure that I was not elected. It was a matter of less than 600 votes to have turned the election the other way. When it is as close as that there can be no certainty of the count. I do not think that it can ever be said with certainty which one of us really got the most votes."

PRETTY GIRLS.

Methods and Apparatus to Make Yourself Pretty When You are Not Born So.

With the very latest notes on fashion before me and my pen suspended, my eyes fell upon an article which lay upon my desk entitled "Gossip about pretty girls." It gives the modish operandi of making one's self beautiful, and goes on to tell how a ruddy blonde of Washington fastened her fat little hands to the headboard on retiring, so as to reduce the supply of blood and produce the delicate complexion of an invalid friend. To allow the mouth to be open in sleep is simply outrageous; so, to assure an avoidance, many a dainty miss wows Morphous with her lower jaw and bend closely bound with a skate strap. A narrow pillow placed vertically under the back and between the shoulders encourages a perfect stature, so the good old bolster is consigned to the comfort of retired belles and beaux. Disregarding the fair, fresh skin, classical mould, and every law of proportion, and in deference to an arbitrary fashion which cannot but prove fatal to beauty and health, our wasp-waisted belles claim the necessity of slumber corsets to retain their name of shapeliness. "A mask of moist rye flour or coating of old cream is as regularly assumed as the night robe, and the feminine head drooped pillowward means curl papers, leads is exceptional. Hot foot baths are a regular feature of the toilet, as they tend to draw the blood from hands and face."

Every girl knows the value of beauty and seeks to make herself as attractive as possible, and should strive to preserve all attractive qualities; but artificial devices only can conceal the ravages of time and dissipation. Still, "without true regard to the laws of health, even the powder box, rouge palette and pencil prove a shallow resource. The maid with a spirituelle cast of features and complexion, clogs the pores of her fair skin with paint, while the vigorous, plump, rosy beauty tortures her digestive apparatus with acids and chulks. Each persists in possessing attributes foreign to her constitution."

It gives advice for "one who knows" in the handling of the eyes and goblet, and says: "Grasp the handle of the cup with the thumb and index forefinger, the latter thrust just through against the thumb and the other fingers open and held out away from the cup, save the second, which should press against the side to steady it. This gives a graceful appearance to the hand. In holding a goblet, it should be grasped by the thumb and first two fingers around the smallest portion of the standard, between the bowl and the bottom, throwing the last two fingers out well." Get through this ordeal and your reputation is assured.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Enjoy Life. What a truly beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, gleams and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health; but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up, disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof, that Green's August Flower, when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy five per cent. of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Constiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the Head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symptoms. Famous Women. Madame Trebelli, the greatest of living contraltos who has traveled extensively, in fact visited every county and city of note in the world, has just departed from the slopes of the Pacific, and often expressing the greatest admiration for the beauty and grandeur of our scenery and the delightful mildness of our climate, left the following written note as a living expression of her opinion in the hands of a Portland druggist, the original of which can be seen on demand.

PORTLAND, Or., April 6, 1887. Dear Mr. Wisdom.—I have tried your "Robertine," and it gives me much pleasure to say that it is excellent for the complexion, being one of the best articles of the kind I have ever used. Believe me, yours sincerely, Z. TREBELL.

If any further proof of the excellence of this article is required call on Messrs. W. E. Dement & Co. of Astoria, Or., who, for the small sum of fifty cents, will produce evidence that will satisfy the most skeptical and fastidious, and give you a beautiful picture card for the trouble of enquiring.

THE PRODUCT OF AN ERA.

The American man, the Drawer imagines, only develops himself and spreads himself and grows "for all he is worth in the Great West. He is more free and limber there, and unfolds those generous peculiarities and largenesses of humanity which never blossomed before. The "environment" has much to do with it. The great spaces over which he roams contribute to the enlargement of his mental horizon. There have been races before who roamed the illimitable desert, but they travelled on foot or on camel-back, and were limited in their range. There's nothing continental about them, as there is about our railway desert travellers, who swing along through thousands of miles of sand and sage-brush with a growing contempt for time and space. But expensive and great as these people have become under the new conditions, the Drawer has a fancy that the development of the race has only just begun, and that the future will show us in perfection a kind of man new to the world. Out somewhere on the Santa Fe route, where the desert of one day was like the desert of the day before, and the Pullman ear rolls and swings over the wide waste beneath the blue sky day after day, under its black flag of smoke, in the early gray of morning when the men were waiting their turns at the abutment bowls, a slip of a boy, perhaps aged seven, stood balancing himself on his little legs, clad in knickerbockers, biding his time, with all the nonchalance of an old campaigner. "How did you sleep, cap?" asked a well-meaning elderly gentleman. "Well, thank you," was the dignified response: as I always do on a sleeping-car." Always does? Great horrors! Gladly out of his swaddling-clothes, and yet he always sleeps well in a sleeper! Was he born on the wheels? Was he cradled in a Pullman? He has always been in motion, probably; he was started at thirty miles an hour, no doubt, this marvelous boy of our new era. He was not born in a house at rest, but the locomotive snatched him along with a shriek and a roar before his eyes were fairly open, and he was rocked in a "section," the first sensation of an old campaigner moving rapidly over vast arid spaces, through cattle ranges, and along canons. The effort of quick and easy locomotion on character may have been noted before, but it seems that never as the production of a new sort of man, the direct product of our railway era. It is not simply that this boy is mature, but he must be a different and a nobler sort of boy than one born, say, at home or on a canal-boat; for whether he was born on the rail or not, he belongs to the railway system of civilization. Before he gets into trousers he is old in experience, and he has discounted many of the novelties that usually break gradually on the pilgrim in this world. He belongs to the new expansive race that must live in motion, whose proper home is the Pullman (which will probably be improved in time into a dustless, sweet-smelling, well-ventilated bedroom), and whose domestic life will be on the wing, so to speak. The Inter-State Commerce Bill will pass him along without friction from end to end of the Union, and perhaps a uniform divorce law will enable him to change his marital relations at any place where he happens to time. This promising lad is only a faint intimation of what we are all coming to when we fully acquire the freedom of the continent, and come into that expansiveness of feeling and of enjoyment that characterizes the Great West. It is a burst of joyous exuberance that comes from the sense of an illimitable horizon. It shows itself in the tender words of a local newspaper at Bowie, Arizona, on the death of a beloved citizen: "Death loves a shiny mark," and she hit a dandy when she turned loose on Jim." And also in the closing words of a New Mexico obituary, which the Kansas Magazine quotes: "Her tired spirit was released from the pain-rack of a long and sorely-earned term of glory at 4:20 Denver time." We die, as it were, in motion, as we sleep, and there is nowhere any boundary to our expansion. Perhaps we shall never again know any rest as we now understand the term—rest being only change of motion—and we shall not be able to sleep except on the cars, and whether we die by Denver time or by the 90th meridian, we shall only change our time. Blessed be this slip of a boy who is a man before he is an infant, and teaches us what rapid transit can do for our race! The only thing that can possibly hinder us in our progress will be second childhood; we have abolished first.—Harper's Magazine for June.
