TRIED TO MAKE IT CLEAR.

As the first act was ending, a gentleman came in and took a seat. When the curtain fell he turned to another gentleman and said: "I beg your pardon, but I came in a little late. Will you give me some idea of what the first act was about, that I may follow the play intelligently?"

"Certainly," replied the second gentleman, "with pleasure. You saw the man with the light trousers and dark coat?"

"Yes." "Well, remember him. He's the planter. Then there's the man with the black suit. He came in second. Then there's the other man in the black suit. Well, the planter interviewed Edith, the girl in the white dress, not the girl in the white dress that stood in the back. Well, this man in the black suit, he used to be a burglar once, and married the girl in the white dress. Well, this other man in the black suit—don't get these two men mixed up—he knows the planter. The other man don't. I think he is going to marry the girl in the white dress."

"Why, I thought he had married her." "Which?" "Why the man in the black suit." "Oh, my dear sir, you have got them mixed up. The first man in the black suit, Livingston, married the first girl in the white dress. Then there's the second man in the black suit?"

"Oh, heavens no! the same first man in the black suit, only this was his name when he was a burglar." "Why, you said he was a brother to Edith, and you said she was married to the planter?" "Well, so I did, and if you will wait one moment, sir, I'll tell you. I guess I can tell a story as good as the next one. Now, sir, she married a planter, ain't that what I said?—because she thinks he's dead, and then—I must hurry up now—she, the other fellow, is going to marry the girl in the white dress."

"Who, Edith?" "No; didn't I tell you she married the planter? I mean the other fellow in the black suit marries the girl in the white dress at the back of the stage. She ain't done it yet; that's in the next act." "But the first act?" "Why, haven't I told you all the first act?" "What did you tell me?" "What did I tell you?—D—it sir, didn't I tell you?"

Here the curtain went up and the two gentlemen watched the play. At the conclusion one arose and said: "Now, I hope you understand,"—but the other gentleman only glared at him.

TRIED IN THE CRUCIBLE.

About twenty years ago I discovered a little sore on my cheek, and the doctors pronounced it cancer. I have tried a number of physicians, but without receiving any permanent benefit.

Among the number were one or two specialists. The medicine they applied was like fire to the sore, causing intense pain. I saw a statement in the papers telling what S. S. S. had done for others similarly afflicted. I procured some of it. Before I had used the second bottle the neighbors could notice that my cancer was healing up. My general health had been bad for two or three years—had a hacking cough and spit blood continually. I had a severe pain in my breast. After taking six bottles of S. S. S. my cough left me and I grew stouter than I had been for several years. My cancer has healed over all but a little spot about the size of a half dime, and it is rapidly disappearing. I would advise every one with cancer to give S. S. S. a fair trial.
