The Nevada City Transcript says that about three years ago the matches kept in a tin box at G. M. Hughes' planing mill disappeared so rapidly that some person around the establishment might have been suspected of filching them, had it not been known that all the employes were strictly honest. Long afterward some changes were made in the building, and on tearing down a wall, there came to light a quantity of matches with the heads gone, the latter having been, apparently, eaten off by rats. Many dead rats were found in the same place, givng proof of the correctness of the theory that the rodents had stolen the matches and devoured the sulphur upon them. One bunch of matches had been ignited while being chewed, but had only par-tially burned. Moral-Keep your matches where rats can't get hold of them
