

The Daily Astorian.

ASTORIA, OREGON:
TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1887
THE vote on the prohibition amendment in Tennessee was 200,000, the largest ever cast in the state.

THE Philadelphia Times wants political committees to publish financial statements showing who contribute campaign funds and to whom payments are made.

THEY are still trying in New York to find out what party is now entitled to representation in the boards of election inspectors, on account of the 60,000 votes cast for Henry George last fall.

THE Chinese have an idea that the humming of telegraph wire will interfere with the rest of their ancestors in the numerous cemeteries; they therefore stoutly resist the erection of telegraph lines.

A WASHINGTON dispatch says that the Hobsonville, Tillamook county, post office has been discontinued. Instead of discontinuing these post offices their number ought to be increased in justice to outlying settlers.

SCORE one for Lillie Devereaux Blake. Senator Ingalls, in his recent article against woman suffrage, says: "The beak, the talon, and thunderbolt are the emblems of national authority."

THE vote at the municipal election in Newark, N. J., is very interesting as a sort of preliminary test of the drift of political sentiment. In the congressional election of last year the vote of the city was: Republican, 11,239; Democratic, 11,127; labor, 4,283; and prohibition, 1,188.

A. G. MEXICAL, chief engineer of the Nicaragua Canal company, says: "We have been making arrangements to send out eight engineering parties, who will leave Greytown either on the 29th or 30th of November. The preliminary surveys are completed, and their work will be to locate the route of the canal, including dams, sites of locks, etc."

THE philosopher of the Lincoln, Neb. Journal says: "There is a man in Lincoln who is generally disliked because he is very sarcastic. His highest ambition in life seems to be to say unpleasant things when there is no occasion for it, and he is consequently avoided and his friends are very few."
