RAILROADS IN DAKOTA.

We were driving past a Dakota settler's house, when he came out and said: "Surveyin' nother railroad?" "No." "Ain't? I swar, I told the old woman we got to move the house ag'in." "Had trouble with the railroad surveyors?" "Yes—been shakin' my house 'round all summer. First some men came along in a buggy, set up some long, slim, barber-pole lookin' sticks, stuck up a three-legged dufunny, humped down, squinted through it, an' then says they: 'Old hoss, you got to move your house 'bout four rods, 'cause we're goin' to run the track of the Dakota and Gum Weed Fork railroad right through here!'" "So you moved it?" "Pulled her right out o' the way. I ain't the man to hinder no public improvements. Then some more come along, an' squinted an' peeked around, an' says they: 'Mr. Granger, we're sorry, but we'll have to trouble you to yank your house around 'bout six rods south.' I made a bee, an' we yanked her." "Didn't that settle it?" "No. In 'bout a week I caught more men a squintin', an' I called the hops an' we put jack-screws under the house an' then I asked the men where we should go. 'Jes' haul her 'bout a quarter of a mile due west, old man,' an' 'fore night me'n the boys had her hauled. I left the wheels right under it that time, an' told Ike not to onyoke the oxen." "You didn't have to move again?" "Yes, but I did. Next mornin' 'fore we was up, 'long come a committee from town and condemned the house, an' ordered me to move inside of ten minutes to make room for the Great Dakota an' North Pole Route. We hooked up an' was snakin' it along while my wife got breakfast, when down come a big fat man with half a dozen double chains an' begun givin' me hail Columbia for drivin' 'cross the right o' way of the Great Dakota an' Oshkosh Road, an' while I was poundin' the oxen, the sheriff threatened to arrest me for obstructin' the depot grounds of the Great Dakota an' Open Air Blizzard line. I jes' managed to get my horse off on to a piece of government land, an' then sat an' watched the surveyors comin' on the run for the next week." "Didn't any of the roads build?" "Oh, no, no; they tell me downtown that they all got their stocks sold to eastern speculators, so there ain't no need o' buildin'. Whew! but you order to see the little pine stakes stuck in my place. You can't walk 'cross in the night 'thout fallin' down faster'n you can git up."

Waste of Tissue Without Repair.
Vigor begins to decline when dyspepsia invades the stomach. The disease prolonged through neglect, entails grievous loss of flesh and serious waste of muscular tissue. To invigorate thoroughly and speedily, a sound stomachic is required. There is none comparable to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, since it institutes, and if continued, perpetuates a repair of the tissues, which have declined in bulk, vigor and elasticity in consequence of non-assimilation of the food. No time should be lost in beginning the reparative process, nor should there be any delay in removing these ailments of frequent occurrence, which contribute to and foster an enfeebled condition of the stomach and nerves, viz: constipation and liver complaint, disorders which the Bitters will assuredly extinguish. It also remedies and prevents malarial and kidney troubles, and is a prime auxiliary in the recovery of strength for convalescents from wasting disease.

In the United States supreme court, last Monday, a decision was made in the Kansas prohibition cases. The decision is, in effect, that the supreme court sustains the right of a state, under its police powers, to suppress the manufacture and sale of liquor within its limits, without any liability on the part of the state for compensation for the value of any property which may be destroyed by such state action. The court thus declares the prohibition law of Kansas to be valid.
