

The Daily Morning Astorian.

VOL. XXIX, NO. 137.

ASTORIA, OREGON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 10, 1887.

PRICE FIVE CENTS.

NOW THEN LOOK AT THIS!!

Having just completed the opening of our useful as well as our ornamental, our plain as well as our decorated ware, we are now prepared for the trade in all its branches. Buying our goods direct from the manufacturers, and always paying cash for them, we not only get them at regular trade prices, as cheap as San Francisco or Portland dealers can buy, but we also get the cash discount; and if any other dealer thinks he can undersell us, he has only to start in, and we will agree that "the longest pole shall knock down the persimmons." We guarantee our patrons that for quality and quantity our prices shall be

AS LOW OR LOWER

than any other house in town. Our sales of Christmas goods have been large, for which we return thanks to our customers, but we still have a full and varied stock of as unique and beautiful goods as can be found in town, and as we have said relative to other goods, we will not be undersold.

The expressions of admiration and satisfaction that have been made by those that have examined or bought from us have been gratifying and assure us that our efforts to please the Astoria public are appreciated. We shall continue as in the past to try and merit the generous patronage bestowed upon us.

Call and see our Dinner Sets, Tea Sets, Toilet Sets, in great variety, Crystal Ware of all kinds, Lamps, either hanging, stand, or hall in large stock, and in short, anything you want to buy.

Remember also that we are still in the grocery and provision trade and are ready to supply you with anything you want in those lines as cheap as the same quality of goods can be sold by any other dealer.

So remember the place to buy is at

D. L. BECK & SONS.

Men Who Live on Almost Nothing.
There is no abstemiousness in the world, and no thrift like the thrift and abstemiousness of the average native of India. Almost alone among the working men of the world, he has raised himself almost above want, has stripped himself of all the impedimenta of luxury. Millions of men in India, especially on the richer soils and in the river deltas, live, marry and rear apparently healthy children, upon an income which, even when the wife works, is rarely above 50 cents a week, and frequently sinks to 35 or 40 cents. The Indian is enabled to do this not so much because of the cheapness of food—for, though it is cheap, an American who ate the same food would want five times the money merely to feed himself—as by a habit of living which makes him independent of the ordinary cares of mankind. He goes nearly without clothes, gives his children none, and dresses his wife in a long piece of the most wretched muslin. Neither he nor his wife pays tailor or milliner one shilling during their entire lives, nor do they ever purchase needles or thread, which, indeed, it is contrary to a semi-religious etiquette ever to use. The poorest peasant inhabits a hut that contains a single covered room of the smallest size, with an earthen platform or two outside of it; and as he constructs and repairs his own dwelling he virtually pays no rent, except for the culturable land. He never touches alcohol or any substitute for it. There is an idea that he eats opium or hemp; but, as a rule, he swallows neither—firstly, because he regards them with as much moral antipathy as any English gentleman, and secondly, because he could not by any possibility pay for articles which in India, as everywhere else, are exceedingly expensive. He eats absolutely no meat, nor any animal fat, nor any expensive grain like good wheat; but lives on millet or small rice, a little milk, with butter from the milk, and the vegetables he grows. Even of these he eats more sparingly than the poorest Tuscan. Perhaps he will eat enough during some festival, but as a rule he knows accurately what will sustain him, and would be enraged with the wife who cooks for him if she prepared more. He is assisted in this economy by a religious rule which a Hindoo never breaks, and which is undoubtedly like the rule against killing oxen, a survival from a military law or custom of the most remote antiquity.

Some Heavy Tunneling.
Nelson Bennett says that during the month of November, thirty days, 505 feet of the Stampede tunnel, on the western division of the Northern Pacific, were all constructed under wall plate. Timbering was done, it being necessitated by the fact that the rock is what is called "short rock"—that is, rock not self-supporting. The above figures show the best tunneling record, surpassing the work of October, 472 feet, under the same circumstances. Dynamite to the amount of 300 pounds and more per day is used in cutting into the mountain.
USING THEM FOR EVERYTHING.
Peter Magerus, residing at 251 Johnson Avenue, Brooklyn, E. D., N. Y., says:
During the last eighteen years I have been using over fifty ALLCOCK'S PLASTERS a year in my family. I have found them a most perfect external remedy. They have repeatedly cured me of rheumatism, to which I am subject every winter. They have cured me of pains in the sides and back three times. My wife, children and mother-in-law tell me ALLCOCK'S PLASTERS are the best remedy ever made, so agreeable, so certain. I know they have cured my wife of pains in the back and of a severe cough. My mother-in-law has been cured of a most severe cold, which threatened to turn into pneumonia, by ALLCOCK'S PLASTERS.
