Fire! Fire!
Is one of the greatest blessings when you have it under control. If you build your fire in one of those Magic Ranges or one of those Acorns or Argands at John A. Montgomery's, you will find it a pleasure to prepare a meal, or if you get one of those Heaters you will find them to be clean and economical and an ornament to your parlor. If you intend getting a range or a heater don't fail to look at his stock. You should call to see his beautiful Ornamental Coal Vases.

FANCY PEN FLOURISHES.

Well Enough in Their Place, But not Essential to Success.
I have just been looking over a circular from one of these schools of penmanship. The circular says it is a good thing for any body to be able to make birds that look as if they were full of fish bones and have a palm leaf fan for a tail. It hints that no person ever succeeded in life unless he could make a picture of a woven wire mattress with a pen. It says that the man who can't stand his capital letters up on spiral springs is going to get lost in the shuffle.
It must have a very depressing effect upon one of these bird-flourishing gentlemen to look over a collection of the autographs of distinguished and successful men. How it must pain one of these penmanship firework artists to find that he can't read half of such a collection.

Shakespeare, for instance, wrote a hand which is calculated to worry one of these men who think the great aim of life is to know when to lean on a pen hard. Shakespeare's autograph looks as if a common, domestic hen had started to walk across the page, stopped to scratch up an angle-worm when part way, found several, left them, and went on walking a little lame. Shakespeare never went to the Stratford business college and school of typewriting and learned to erect a capital H with feathers on its leg. Still Shakespeare was something of a success mentally. Then there is Jay Gould. Jay doesn't write a signature which you can spell out and will spring back into shape, like these commercial college professors. He can't construct an autograph all mixed up in a bird with a wing growing out of the back of its neck. In fact, his autograph hath no wing at all, but, to quote from the poet, it gets there just the same on a bank check. Colonel Gould is all right financially. Then there is John L. Sullivan. When he puts on a four-ounce glove and places his signature in an autograph album there is nothing pretty about it, but notwithstanding he has made remarkable progress in his chosen field of study. Dr. Sullivan is all right physically.
It wouldn't be very hard to name 3000 or 4000 others who have succeeded without being able to make a pen act as if it had a hard attack of insanity. In fact, no man, unless he was running a business college, ever got so he could earn his own living with reasonable certainty, who could make a penmanship dove to save his life. No man ever yet made a success who padded all of his capital W's in just the right place and put fringe on his M's. No man who can make a dove with a scroll in its bill can become President.—Carruth in Chicago Tribune.

How Billy Patterson Was Struck.

About forty years ago, at one of the medical colleges of this country, they had a trick of hazing every new man who entered the institution. They would secure him hand and foot, carry him before a mock tribunal and there try him for some high crime with which they charged him. He would be convicted, and sentenced to be led to the block and decapitated. A student named William Patterson came along in time, and was put through the court and sentenced in the usual solemn impressive manner. He was blindfolded and led to the block, and his neck placed in position. The executioner swung the ax and buried it in the block allowing it, to be sure, to go no where near Patterson's head. The students laughed when the trick was at an end, but Patterson was dead. He had died from what medical men call a shock. All the students were put under arrest and the question arose, "Who struck Patterson?" On the trial it was shown that nobody struck him, but the medical students retained the expression and it has come down through them to the present day.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

A Telegraph Circuit of Over Ten Thousand Miles.

Operators at the office of the Postal Telegraph Co., at Albany, N. Y., lately witnessed a conversation carried on by wire over the largest circuit ever worked, and was the greatest telegraphic feat yet accomplished.
As explained to the Albany Express reporter, who dropped into the neat and business-like office while the experiment was going on, the trial was a most interesting one. It appears that special commissioner Henry Norman, who is making a tour of the British colonies, having arrived at Vancouver, carried on a conversation with London, England, over the Canadian Pacific and Commercial Co.'s wires. At one end of the line was Mr. Hearst, of the San Francisco Examiner, and at the other end Mr. Stead, of the Pall Mall Gazette, London.

There was an unbroken telegraph circuit from San Francisco to New York, 4600 miles, the distance from New York to London, via Canso, N. S., being 3500 miles in all. The telegraph lines making up this circuit ran from San Francisco to New York, via Vancouver, B. C., Montreal and Albany, connecting at New York with the Mackey-Bennett Postal Cable Co. Telegrams exchanged between San Francisco and London were therefore only repeated at New York, Canso and Bristol, England, the latter point being the landing place of the Mackey-Bennett cable. The object of this experiment was to demonstrate the fact that London and Vancouver were practically within "speaking distance" of each other. These unbroken lines demonstrate the fact that their system can be successfully maintained during the most rigorous season of the year.

At 1:12 P. M. Mr. Norman at Vancouver, asked Mr. Stead, at London, a question "receiving a reply in five minutes. Mr. Stead then asked, "How far off are you from London?" In four minutes the reply flashed back, "nine thousand six hundred miles," which with the twelve hundred miles to San Francisco added, makes a grand total of 10,800 miles. Conversation was kept up for two hours. Mr. Norman said, among other things, "I can see the Pacific, and in a few days start on a 400 mile voyage in another English ship, the Parthia, over another ocean; yet I am able to report myself to you and talk as quickly and as easily as if we were speaking through a tube. The wire which unites us is a most striking symbol of our imperial unity, and of the unfailing federation which will one day girdle the globe. Is not the click of his key, heard in two hemispheres, more eloquent than all the arguments of empire ever penned?"

Scarlet Fever and Diphtheria
Are spread by contagion, by the transfer of living matter. These particles come from the skin, the membranous lining of the mouth, nose and throat, and from the intestines and urinary organs. Disinfect promptly and thoroughly with Darby's Prophylactic Fluid the great germ destroyer.
Prof. H. T. Lupton, of the Vanderbilt University, Tenn., says: "As a disinfectant and detergent Darby's Prophylactic Fluid is superior to any preparation with which I am acquainted."

In the last two centuries Holland has reclaimed 1,000,000 acres of land from the sea, and the work goes on at the rate of eight acres per day.
