sheep in the United States, 72,-000,000 in Australia and 100,000,-000 in the Argentine Republic. In this country there be allotted two-thirds of a sheep to each inhabitant. In the Argentine Republic there are twenty-five sheep, and in Uruguay forty sheep to every man, woman and child. In the United States it is estimated there are 40,000,000 of horned cattle to a population of 60,000,-000; the Argentine Republic and Uruguay have 38,000,000 cattle and a population of 4,500,000. In Uruguay, with a population of 500,000 souls, there are 8,000,000 of cattle, 20,000,000 sheep, 2,000, 000 horses, or sixty head of stock to each man, woman and child. Fifteen million dollars have been invested in wire fences in Uruguay alone, and more than twice as much in the Argentine Republic. In either of these countries a cow can be bought for five dollars, a steer fattened for market for ten or twelve dollars, a pair of oxen for twenty-five dollars, a sheep for fifty cents, an ordinary working horse eight to ten dollars and a roadster for twenty-five dollars, a mule for fifteen dollars, and a mare for whatever the hide will bring. Mares are never broken to saddle or harness, but are allowed to run wild in the pastures from the time they are foaled until they cease to be of value in breeding, when they are driven to the saledros or slaughter houses and killed for their hides. A man who would use a mare under the saddle or before the wagon would be considered of unsound mind. There is a superstition against it.

One of the greatest yields of butter ever given at a public trial has just been reported from Australia, says Bells Messenger. A the recent national agricultural show at Melbourne, Daisy, a halfbreed Ayrshire cow bred by John Grant, of Seafield, Victoria, gave one hundred and seven and threefourths pounds of milk in two days, from which the extraordinrry quantity of seven pounds, five and one-half ounces, or three pounds, ten and three-fourths ounces per day was produced. At the same trial an imported Holstein-Friesian cow, Dairymaid gave one hundred and twentythree pounds of milk in two days, from which the quantity of butter made was four pounds' three-
