An Engineer's Opinion.

The Boston Journal of Commerce tells a funny story on the authority of a commercial traveler.

Our traveling friend inquired if the boiler had ever been cleaned out.

"Oh, yes, answered the attendant, pointing to a bunch of rags on a stick which he occasionally dragged through the tubes."

"But how about the inside; have you ever been into the boiler?" asked the gentleman of the shop.

"I'll tell you," said the shoveler of shavings; "me and another feller started one Sunday to see how she looked inside. We unscrewed that nut on the manhole and went to lift out the plate, and I'll be darned if the plate isn't bigger than the hole. It must have been put in when the boiler was made."
