The great Japan gulf current, flowing by our shores on the west, and the chain of mountain ranges on the north and east modify our climate to such an extent that if it were not for these conditions we should experience that severity of weather so common in the northern part of the eastern states. As it is, our climate is mild and healthful, and a temperature of 85 degrees during the hottest period in the summer is unusual, and the freezing point in winter is more so. The immediate coast region has a smaller range of temperature, while the great "inland empire" of eastern Oregon has more frequently a temperature of 100 degrees in summer, and zero in winter, than have the large and fertile valleys of the interior. The appellation of "web-feet" is conferred on Oregonians, but this is a misnomer. True we have our rainy and dry seasons, but by the one we do not mean continuous rain, nor by the other a continuance of dry weather. By the former it should be understood that it is merely to designate the possibility of rain rather than the rain itself. An explanation of the rainfall record will show how erroneous is the idea, held by many an easterner, that it rains all the time in Oregon. From the 15th With Oysterville Mails and Express daily of September to the first of November, we have showers; and same from March 15 to May 15 From November 1st to March 15th, the rainfall is copicus; not too excessive, nor of daily occurrence. Even in this period it will be clear together; the grass is green and growing, and it resembles the eastern spring. From May 15th to Scptember 15th we have occasional showers, but so few of these sional showers, but so few of these
