MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT, for Man and

PRINCE BISMARCK.

He Hates Newspapers But He Makes Good Use of Them.

Prince Bismarck, says a Paris correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, refers to the work of the press as "nothing but printers' ink spread on paper." But no man reads the papers more diligently than he. Besides personally reading every day a dozen or more of the leading journals from various European capitals, he keeps a staff of from four to six clerks constantly at work, like the exchange editors in a newspaper office, scanning the columns of hundreds and perhaps thousands of papers from all parts of the world, and chipping out every item that can possibly be of interest to him. These clippings, with the names and dates of the papers from which they are taken, are carefully classified and indexed and pasted in enormous scrap-books. These velumes form a conspicuous feature in the Chancellor's private library. There is one lettered on the back "Socialism," another" France-Millitary," another "France-Civil," another "Russia," another Culturkampf, and so on. Each volume is subdivided into chapters, and all so carefully indexed that the statesman can in a moment turn to what has been said by any particular paper on any particular subject. This vast encyclopedia is made use of in many ways. I remember a gentleman from Chicago telling me a few years ago a curious incident of his visit to Berlin. He called on Prince Bismarck armed with a note of introduction from the German minister at Washington. The Prince received him cordially, and after a few general remarks, said: "I see that your Chicago papers are pitching into me on the pork question." And then he went on to quote the exact language the various papers used, and replied to their arguments. "He told me," said the gentleman, "more about the Chicago papers and the porkpacking industries than I knew myself, though I have lived there all my life. And before I left in came congressman-from California, and the Prince at once turned on him with a lot of talk about the silver question and what the Pavilie Coast newspapers were say-

By taking Simmons Liver Regulator, the bowels will be gently moved: as naturally as if no medicine had been taken. Regularity in taking the medicine will son effect a permanent relief. There is said to be almost a continuous line of glacers from the head of Glacier bay to Copper iver, Alaska, a distance of about 500 miles. This wall of ice follows the crest of the Coast range, stretching its arms down nearly every canyon and in many places debouching sheer into the sea. At the head of Glacier bay is an icy waste of thousands of acres, and at times upon its glassy surface reflections of strange cities
