ASTORIA, OREGON:

TUESDAY, JUNE 25, 1888.

THE CHICAGO NOMINATIONS.

BLAINE finally succeeded in getting the ninth quadrennial convention of the Republican party to take him at his word, and yesterday his political heir, Gen. Harrison, of Indiana, was nominated for president. Indiana is the pivotal state this year, and in taking Blaine's advice and choosing an Indiana man for the Republican presidential nominee, the convention acted with more wisdom than it was supposed in the closing hours of last week it would do.

Just what Harrison's record is on the Chinese question cannot at present be ascertained. The fact that California so promptly cast its vote for Harrison implies that Saturday's squabble was cleared up.

The St. Louis convention disregarded Voorhees' eloquent warning and discarded Indiana's claims for second place. The Chicago convention gives an Indiana man and a man popular with the Hoosiers, first place.

In 1864 Indiana, in the presidential election, gave 20,389 Republican majority; in 1872, 22,515 Republican majority; in 1876, 5,515 Democratic majority; in 1880, 6,642 Republican majority; in 1884, out of a total vote of 494,774, Cleveland had 244,990; Blaine, 238,463; Butler, 8,293; St. John, 3,028.

The figures for '84 show how closely the state is divided.

This year the campaign will be a conflict of ideas, and with a candidate from Indiana, on a platform so clear cut and unequivocal, it looks as though Harrison should carry his own state.

With Indiana the Republicans only need four more electoral votes to give them the necessary 201 to elect.

The nomination of Levi P. Morton for the vice-presidency may be looked upon as a mistake. New York is lost to the Republicans. The great empire state is Republican, but the great foreign free trade importing city on Manhattan Island, and its annex on Long Island, are "fermints" American protective policy, and will count the 36 electoral votes for Mr. Cleveland.

To have taken Phelps of New Jersey, might have given the Republican ticket New Jersey's nine electoral votes; better yet, the nomination of Hawley of Connecticut, would have doubtless insured Connecticut's six electoral votes in the electoral college.

However, the convention, which seems to have had some political idiots in its composition, might have nominated Depew, or some other deadener, and so, on the whole, it is to be congratulated on what it didn't do, as much as what it did.

WM. HENRY HARRISON, "Tippecanoe and Tyler too," the grandfather of Gen. Harrison, was elected president in 1840. Of 294 votes in the electoral college he got 234, Van Buren receiving 60. That year there were polled 2,410,778 votes, of which Harrison got 1,275,017.

PENDLETON progresses; at the last session of its town council it was ordered that cows should no longer be allowed to go at large in its streets.

BENJAMIN HARRISON, the Republican presidential nominee, bears considerable personal resemblance to Hon. M. C. George.

RECENT returns show the emigration from Ireland last year was 80,000, an increase of 20,000 over the preceding year. The population has dwindled to 4,750,000.

THE GERMAN EMPEROR.

A Pacific Speech On His Accession.

(SPECIAL TO THE ASTORIAN) BERLIN, June 25.—The Reichstag opened to-day with pomp and brilliancy; after divine service in the court chapel. The emperor was escorted to the great ceremony in the hall of the old castle where he declared the session opened. Throughout his speech the emperor dwelt upon Germany's pacific disposition. He says his policy aims solely to ward off attack and not to acquire military glory. The empire he declares desires peace with all nations. The emperor says further that Germany will adhere to her alliance with Austria, which public opinion supports as the basis of European equilibrium and inheritance of German history. The same relations and national needs unite Germany and Italy. These relations will permit careful cultivation of the emperor's personal friendship with the Czar, and maintenance of pacific relations with Russia which have lasted for a century in consonance with the emperor's feelings and Germany's interests.

A TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE.

A Schooner's Crew on the Open Sea in Small Boats—Fourteen Men Lost.

(S. F. Bulletin 21.)

Yesterday the steamer Bertha arrived from Karluk, having on board three sailors of the schooner Isabel, which left this port on April 14th, on a codfishing trip. On the 1st of May the vessel encountered a gale and sprang a leak, but a sail was placed over it and the pumps quickly freed the vessel of water. The following morning the sail was carried away, but was again adjusted before any serious damage was done. On May 3d the sail again became displaced, and the water poured in in torrents. The captain seeing that he could not save the vessel, gave orders to the men to take to the small boats, and on that evening the crew left in eight dories. Five of them contained two men each and the others three men each. The skills were divided into two parties of four each, and connected by ropes and provisioned with salt ham, crackers and water. On the first night it was quite calm, but the following morning a breeze sprang up and the sails were set, and as some of the dories sailed faster than the others, they parted company, four of the boats remaining together. On the afternoon of the second day a strong gale came on, and the occupants of the dories had to take to their oars, and in order to keep the head on the sea, so that the skills would not turn and be capsized. The gale was increasing all the time, the sea running mountains high. In the morning two of the dories had disappeared, in all probability foundering during the gale.

Gorman, one of the survivors, was in one of the remaining boats, and the second mate in the other, and when the storm moderated in the morning, they found that their comrades had gone crazy. The two had considerable difficulty in overpowering the crazy men, but they finally transferred them into the mate's boat, and at 3 o'clock they told the mate that they would have to shift for themselves. They paid no heed to the remark and Gorman and the mate hoisted the sail and parted company with them. For the next three days they were tossed about, and not having a compass they sailed by the stars. On the 8th of May, being five days in the open sea, they sighted the land. When they first sighted it the wind was blowing stiff from shore, and for forty-eight hours they had to pull in order to reach the island.

There they found three of the men that had left the vessel, Dave Harris, Harry Brown and Harry Holmes, who had landed about thirteen hours previous to them. The other three sailors informed him that on the morning of the 5th of May the dory with R. Noble and Thomas Kenneff capsized. The captain, who was in another of the dories, endeavored to pull Kenneff into his boat, and in so doing, his skiff capsized. The third mate picked up the captain and pulled him into the boat, but he had been there but a few minutes before he expired. When the men reached the island their feet were so badly swollen from being in contact with the salt water that they were unable to move about, and had to crawl on their hands and knees in order to obtain the wood to build a fire. After being on the island for thirteen days they sighted the schooner Otter, and were brought to a settlement on Kodiak Island. From this place they rowed to Karluk, a distance of ninety-six miles, at which place they were taken aboard the steamer Bertha.

Of the crew of nineteen men who left here on the Isabel all have perished save five, two of whom are still in Karluk, having been too weak to return on the Bertha. Captain Henry Nickerson, who had charge of the vessel, leaves a widow and two children residing in this city. The Isabel was owned by Captain Anderson and Captain Nickerson. She was insured for a few thousand dollars. She was one of the oldest vessels in the codfishing fleet, being about twenty years old. The Isabel is the second vessel that has been lost on the Alaska coast this year, the Julia Foard having previously gone ashore in Karluk river.

A Sound Legal Opinion.

E. Bainbridge Munday Esq., County Atty., Clay Co., Texas says: "Have used Electric Bitters with most happy results. My brother also was very low with Malarial Fever and Jaundice, but was cured by timely use of this medicine. Am satisfied Electric Bitters saved his life."

Mr. D. I. Wilcoxson, of Horse Cave, Ky., adds a like testimony, saying: He positively believes he would have died had it not been for Electric Bitters. This great remedy will ward off, as well as cure all Malaria Diseases, and for all Kidney, Liver and Stomach Disorders stands unequalled. Price 50 cents and $1, at Jno C. Dement's.

REMARKS FROM DR. HOUGHTON.

Regarding The Presidential Nominee.

There Are no Flies on Benjamin Harrison.

PORTLAND, June 25.—Rev. Dr. Houghton, pastor of Grace M. E. church, who is personally acquainted with Ben Harrison, said in an interview: "Yes, I know a good deal about Mr. Harrison. Harrison made a good record in congress; he is about 50 years old; short, thick set and vigorous and well preserved; he has a splendidly formed head. He is a man of dignity, and at first seems reserved, but on further acquaintance he will be found to be a genial gentleman. He is an elder in the first Presbyterian church in Indianapolis, and has been for years. He is regarded as a thorough-going Christian man and is very popular with all classes of people at home. He is a great favorite with Indiana people irrespective of party. He was raised on a farm and came to Indianapolis when quite a young man and has practiced law in that city from that time to this except during the rebellion, and during his term of six years in the United States senate. He has long been regarded as one of the leading lawyers of Indiana."

Personally Dr. Houghton expressed himself greatly gratified by the nomination of Harrison, and he thinks he is one of the very best and ablest men that could have been nominated. Mr. Harrison's family consists of his wife, two sons and one lovely daughter. The eldest son resides in Helena, Montana, where he married a very beautiful young lady who was quite a belle in Washington in the winter of 1884.

Mr. Houghton thinks Harrison stands a splendid chance of carrying New York and the doubtful eastern states. He is in moderate circumstances financially.
