

The Daily Astorian.

ASTORIA, OREGON: FRIDAY, JUNE 29, 1888. THE STATE VOTE.

The official canvass of the vote of the election of the 4th inst. shows two things; an increase in the total vote cast, and an increase of the Republican vote. The vote indicates the total population of the state to be 300,000.

There were 60,207 votes cast for congressman; of these Hermann received 32,820; Gearin 25,413; Miller 1,974.

In 1886, the Republican candidate for congress had 26,918 votes; in 1888 he had 32,820 votes; an increase of 5,902 votes.

In 1886 the Democratic candidate for congress had 25,283 votes; in 1888 he had 25,413 votes; an increase of 130 votes.

In 1886 the Prohibition candidate for congress had 2,753 votes; in 1888 1,974 votes; a decrease of 779 votes.

On the 4th of this month there were cast 60,207 votes; in June 1886, 54,954 votes; an increase of 5,253 votes in the entire vote.

In 1886 Hermann for congress lacked 559 votes of having a majority. In 1888 he has a majority of 2,716 of more than half the votes cast.

The largest gain in Republican votes on the 4th, was in Multnomah county, which gave 4,332 Republican votes in 1886, and 5,981 in 1888.

The next largest gain and the largest proportional gain of any county in the state was in Grant, which gave 795 Republican votes in 1886 and 1,116 in '88.

That county gave 794 Democratic votes in '86, and 818 in '88.

The Democratic vote of '88 shows a gain over the vote of '86 in every county in the state except Baker, Clackamas, Columbia, Curry, Lane, Morrow, Multnomah, Polk, Union, and Yamhill.

The Republican vote of '88 shows a gain over the vote of '86 in every county in the state except Cook, Marion, Morrow, Union, and Yamhill.

Every county in the state shows an increase in the vote cast over that of '86 the falling off in a few instances being accounted for by the creation of new counties.

Yamhill county, comparing '88 with '86, shows a Republican loss of 63 votes, and a Democratic loss of 89 votes.

The gain of votes as geographically distributed, indicates a uniform growth all over the state.

In Clatsop county, comparing '88 with '86, the Republicans gained 199 votes; the Democrats 4 votes.

There will be held in London on November 6th next, an international trades congress. The subjects to be touched upon will be the most efficacious means for removing the obstacles to free combination in foreign countries; the best methods of combination among the various countries; the limitation of production by means of the reduction of the hours of labor and the question of allowing the state to determine what the hours for labor shall be.

The folly of attempting political prophecy is illustrated by the leading journals of the country now being received at this office, published previous to the nomination by the Chicago convention. They solemnly and oracularly announce that what was done would not be done, and that what was not done would be done.

But two out of the whole lot guessed right—the Minneapolis Tribune, Republican, and the Cleveland Plain Dealer, Democratic.

The brief reign of Kaiser Fritz was marked with the abolition of the cavalryman's cuirass. This is the last cuirass in the continental armies, and England is now calling for its abolition in her army. In the German army the revolver has also been discarded in favor of the carbine.

JOHN BRIGHT has declined the honor of a peerage and a consequent membership in the house of lords, proffered him by the queen. There is probably not another statesman in England who would have the moral standing to resist such a temptation.

The late James Freeman Clarke of Boston once embodied a pertinent truth in a few words, when he declared that "the politician thinks of the next election and the statesman of the next century."

REPRESENTATIVE TIMOTHY J. CAMPBELL has made a bet of $5,000 with ex-representative Page of California that New York state will go for Cleveland in November.

The first salmon ever caught in the Hudson river, it is said, was taken from Newburg bay on Friday week. It weighed 9 1/2 pounds and was sold for $5.

"QUEERED" THE SHOW.

Bad Breaks Made by a Theatrical Agent.

"Talking about superstitious people," said an old theatrical advance agent as he settled himself comfortably in a chair for a chat, "the worst people on earth for that are in the theatrical profession. Whether it is because their life, like a gambler's, depends largely upon chance, it is hard to say, but in this respect the two professions are just alike. I recollect once last fall an incident happened that almost converted me to their idea. I had not been long on the road, and in laying out the rooms for the company at Virginia, a little town in Illinois, I assigned our southeasterly and southerly rooms to the most comfortable room to be had in the hotel. The ladies were delighted upon their arrival and showered upon their blushing and humble servant profuse thanks and bewitching glances. It being my first stand with the company, I went down stairs, highly elated at my success in pleasing the ladies and making a favorable impression upon the two prettiest women in the troupe, but alas! I was counting my chickens before they were hatched, for I had hardly got seated in the corridor when the bell-boy with a ludicrous look of horror upon his face, whispered: 'Somebody does matter in 13, sir, dey wants yer.'"

"Supposing something serious had happened, I rushed up stairs to the room, where I was met by the southeasterly. Seizing me by the arm, and stamping her pretty foot, she fairly shrieked, 'How—how dare you, sir, put me in No. 13? I won't stand it! I'll leave the company first,' and bang went the door in my face.

"To say I was surprised would be drawing it mild. I was knocked silly, and stood for a minute fairly dazed by her outburst of temper, but recovering my senses I sought out the manager for an explanation.

"'Holy Moses!' he yelled, 'you don't mean to tell me you put her in 13? Whew! You have played the dickens. We'll have to get that room changed at once.' Then he explained to me that it was next to impossible to get an actor to sleep in a room numbered 13, as they believed it to be 'dead bad luck.'"

"We went down stairs together, but as it was court week no other room could be got, so the girls were obliged to stay there. Would you believe it, that girl caught the measles and had to lay by for a week. She has never spoken to me since.

"Another time, in Kansas, I was with a company playing week stands and generally held the door on the opening nights. In this town they had to come up a long stairway to get into the opera house, which was nothing more than a hall with a flat floor. It was a nasty, drizzling, cold night, and looked bad for the show, but as the advance sale had been good we were in hopes of doing a fair business. I was standing at the head of the stairs when a man came up and handed me a 'comp.' I took it. Just at that moment my manager dashed up the stairs, waving his arms like a windmill trying to make some kind of a signal for me to stop the man, but it was too late. He had gone in.

"What's the matter?" I asked innocently.

"'Matter? O, good Lord, hear the man, he said as he dropped on the chair with a groan. 'Why, confound you, don't you know you have queered the show by letting that fellow in? Don't you know that if the first man is a deadhead he's a Jonah?'

"Sure enough, we dropped money in the town, and I have seen the same thing over and over again. You may laugh, but it's so.

"Now, I ain't superstitious a bit," he concluded as he rose to go, and threw away his cigar, "but I'll tell you what's a fact—we never yet showed in a town where we met a funeral but what we did good business. But I must be off. Good night."
