Lewis came very near losing his life, He and the cook, a man named Martin, got into an altercation when the latter drew a knife, and before the captain was aware of his in-tention, stabbed him in the side. As Capt. Lewis raised his band to defend himself, Martin slashed him across the fingers, nearly cutting two of them from the hand. The crew seeing what was going on, rushed in, seized the man and placed him in irons.

The great log ship was successfully launched into the Bay of Fundy, at Joggins, Nova Scotia, last Tuesday. FROM THE ARCTIC.

Return of The Jeanie-Latest News From Port Clarence, Etc.

Captain O. J. Humphrey, of the steamer Jeanie, has just returned from Port Clarence, for which port he left Nanaimo on the 8th of June last, with coal for whalers. Arrived at Port Clarence on the 23d, having had a remarkable trip; left Port Clarence on the 13th of July, arriving at Oun-alaska on the 17th of July, and sailed again the next day. Met the United States revenue cutter Bear leaving Ounalaska for the Arctic ocean. At Ounalaska met the United States revenue cutter Richard Rush, and the United States man of war Thetis. The latter had on board governor Swineford, of Alaska, bound for the Arctic ocean, having come from a visit to the Aleatian islands. The Thetis will proceed to the Arctic ocean, returning via Sitka, to arrive here about the last of September. Captain Humphrey reports the last winter in the Behring sea the most severe ever known for ice, and in the Arctic ocean the most open. Point Barrow was reached by the steam whaler Orca July 4th, an occurence which has never happened before at that season of the year. Open water was seen to the east as far as the eye could reach. The Jeanie experienced calm weather in the Behring sea all through the passage, but met with considerable fog. On the 4th of July there were 25 American flags flying from 25 different whalers at Portion 25 different whater 25 different whater 25 different whater 25 differe Clarence, all commanded by captain Codders, and not a for-eign flag visible. The whalers have been fortunate in their catch this season. The whaling fleet from San Francisco numbers 40, of a tonnage of from 600 down to 75 tons (among those are 9 steamers) the total tonnage being about 16,000 tons. No sealing vessels have been seen in the sea of Kamschatka this season The seals on the seal islands are re-

In the springtime of the year the whaling is done. They go into the ice to the westward of the Pribiloff islands, follow the Siberian shore going with the ice and keeping ahead of the whales to get into the Arctic ocean before them. They go as far as the pack ice. Some of the whalers got jammed into the ice April 13th, and were not liberated for fifty-nine days. No casualties reported.

Port Clarence is a point of periodical rendezvous for the Esquimaux for a long distance, some as far as 500 miles, for the purpose of trading their firs for tobacco and cloth. They live in frame houses covered with walrus skins and dress in deerskin furs. Their canoes (kyaks) are of frame covered with walrus hide. They sleep in skin bags, first stripping themselves naked, and never build a fire.—Victoria Times. Is Consumption Incurable?
