LUM WILLIAMS' CLOSE CALL.

He Had to Whip His Weight in Wild Oats Before He Was Safe.

Panther Knob Letter.
Lum Williams, an old mountaineer and hunter, of Panther mountain had an adventure a few days since which he will not soon forget.

As he sat on the porch of farmer Peters' and told the story, he was the picture of about as badly dilapidated a specimen of humanity as one sees in a life time. One arm was carried in a sling, his right leg rested upon a stool wrapped from thigh to ankle with linen cloths, while his face, once smooth and fresh, notwithstanding his age of over half a century, had the appearance of having been cultivated with a fine-pronged garden rake from his hair to his coat collar.

"I was going up the mountain on a squirrel hunt with my two squirrel dogs, Snap and Nig," said the old mountaineer. "We had gone about a mile, and I had killed five or six squirrels, when Snap began to bark in a fierce way about 100 yards off. Before I got to the dog Nig had joined him, and the two kept up a terrible racket.

I hurried on, expecting to find that they had treed a coon or holed a fox. When I got to the spot I found the dogs had holed some animal in a hollow, rotten log. The log was poplar, and about 20 feet long, with a hole nearly a foot in diameter at the mouth.

"The dog wouldn't go in. I thought that strange as they never before went back on a fight with a coon, and that was what I thought was in the log. So I tried to poke the coon, as I supposed it was, out of the hole, but the only pole I could get wouldn't reach. Finding I couldn't move the game that way, I threw down the pole and examined the log. I soon discovered that it was very rotten and that there was a crack in it about half way down. I made up my mind to try and pry that log open, and I am sorry to say I succeeded.

"Almost as soon as I got a stick in the crack and began to pry, the confounded thing flew apart and out sprang three thundering big catamounts. Great Scott! how they did pitch into us. Two of them sprang at me. One seized my left arm near the shoulder and ripped it from shoulder to wrist with his long claws. I struck at the brutes with the heavy oak stick I held, and by good luck knocked one of them over just as the other one jumped at my face. I couldn't stop him, and he came down on my face with both claws, ripping through the skin and flesh like red hot iron. Just then Snap caught the cat by the flank and pulled him off. That saved me. The dog and cat rolled over and over on the ground while I was trying my best, with the blood pouring down my face, to get a blow in on the cat. I succeeded at last in striking it across the small of the back as it rolled over on top of the dog. That blow broke its back, but it had done for the dog, which was torn almost into ribbons.

"I had overlooked the one I struck in the first place, and by this time the infernal brute had got on its feet and sprang on me just as I raised from striking the other one. This fellow did not get a fair hold on me, but he got close enough to rip my leg from thigh to calf with his claws. I struck it in the face with the end of the club, and as it dropped to the ground I threw my whole force in the blow, which I delivered upon its head, knocking it over on its back, and I beat it to death.

"The cat which had jumped at the dogs in the first place I now saw lying about 20 feet away, with Nig holding it by the throat. The cat was dead and so was the dog, which lay with entrails torn out, but still with a death grip on the throat of the cat. If the dog had ever let go of that cat I would have been finished between them. As it was, after the fight was over I fainted with pain and loss of blood, and lay, I suppose, on the ground for an hour or more.

When I came to I dragged myself to the road, half a mile away, where I found water, with which I bathed my wounds. Luckily for me Peters, here, happened to come along and brought me to his house."

"I have had many close fights in my time with bears, panthers and wildcat in these mountains, but this one was the closest call I ever had, and it was all owing to the fact that I neglected to take a knife or pistol with me."

Sore Throat
Is particularly favorable to the contraction of Diphtheria. Heed the warning, and use Darby's Trophic Fluid. It is at once allays the inflammation of the throat, subdues the pain and gives permanent relief. It promptly and effectually destroys all contagion and diphtheric germs. It is a safeguard against Diphtheria, and should be used on the first symptoms of sore throat as a gargle.

Since January 1, 1888, no less than 130,000 persons have left Great Britain and Ireland to settle in the United States. This seems strange when it is remembered that carpets and fine woolen cloths are cheaper there than here.

THE FIRST SYMPTOMS OF DEATH.
Knowing that a cough can be checked in a day, and the first stages of consumption broken in a week we hereby guarantee Acker's English Cough Remedy, and will refund the money to all who buy, take it as per directions, and do not find our statement correct.
J. W. Conn, Druggist.

It was a Newark man who sent $1 in answer to an advertisement stating that the advertiser would impart the secret of living forever for that small sum. The secret was, "Don't die."

A Double Help for the Bilious.
In addition to that chief remedial measure—the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters—persons suffering from an acute bilious attack, will facilitate recovery by the use at first of milk and lime water and thin gruels, and a very gradual return to the use of solid foods. Fatty substances should be excluded from the diet. Blue pill is a remedy of doubtful safety, particularly if there be nausea and vomiting, frequent concomitants of liver trouble. The Bitters, provided its reforming action be not retarded and marred by gross indiscretions in diet, will soon restore the equilibrium of and action of the liver, stomach and bowels, all three disordered by biliousness. In all forms of malarial disease, which in every one of its phases presents indication of liver trouble, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the foremost of specifics. The light of thirty years' experience also shows it to be a fine remedy for rheumatism, kidney troubles, dyspepsia, nervousness and debility.

Edward Deputy, a farmer at Fairmount, Ill., has gone insane over politics.

Catarth Cured.
A clergyman, after years of suffering from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, and vainly trying every known remedy, at last found a recipe which completely cured and saved him from death. Any sufferer from this dreadful disease sending a self addressed stamped envelope to Prof. J. A. Lawrence, 88 Warren St., New York City, will receive the recipe free of charge.

Canada is thoroughly aroused by the talk of annexation to the United States.

PARENTS CRIMINALLY LIABLE.
More than half of all deaths occur before six years of age. An army of innocent, lovely children are swept needlessly away each year. Parents are criminally responsible for this. The death rate of children in England is less than half this. Acker's English Baby Sooter has done more to bring this about than all other causes combined. You cannot afford to be without it.
J. W. Conn, Druggist.

It is said that the noise of voters flopping from one party to another in New York keeps the politicians awake at nights.

BETTER THAN SUICIDE.
Professor Arnold says: "An incurable dyspepsia is justified in committing suicide." We will guarantee to cure any dyspeptic within three months by Acker's English Dyspepsia Tablets.
J. W. Conn, Druggist.

People don't grow famous in a hurry, and it takes a great deal of hard work even to earn your bread and butter.—Louisa M. Alcott.

There is no greater mistake than that made by the man who is selfishly seeking any kind of happiness at the expense of others.
