"I have been suffering for over two years with Dyspepsia. For the last year I could not take a drink of cold water nor eat any meat without vomiting it up. My life was a misery. I had had recommended Simmons Liver Regulator, of which I am now taking the second bottle, and the fact is that words cannot express the relief I feel. My appetite is very good, and I digest everything thoroughly. I sleep well now, and I used to be very restless. I am fleshing up fast; good strong food and Simmons Liver Regulator have done it all. I write this in hopes of benefiting some one who has suffered as I did, and would take oath to these statements if desired."

The Value Of Reputation.

Reputation is the opinion of the world about a man. Character is the fact itself, but reputation is what we think about that fact. Reputation thus becomes a factor in the business world, and has a money value which can be increased or lost.

Judicious advertising is a help. No storekeeper who depends upon simple, fair dealing alone can make a very great or sudden success. He is an honest man, but the people do not know it. Hence, he must use all legitimate means to acquaint them with that fact. If he is a judge of the articles of his trade, so that his customers can rely upon his selections, he must convince customers of his superior knowledge before it will net him a return. But once his reputation is established, built up by slow degrees, so that his neighbors one by one yield their judgment to the growing opinion of our retailer's abilities then this neighborhood or state opinion becomes a valuable property, as much so as a house or lot. This is so true that a mere label is often enough to secure for the goods it covers a much higher price than for other articles possi bly of as good, or it may be of even better quality. Grocers and consumers can better afford the higher price with the implied warrant of its reputation, than accept another brand at less price, but upon which a lack of reputation casts a doubt.

Thus a reputation is worth striving for, and when achieved, is the foundation for prosperity. It is one of the rewards offered by the world for hard work and continued fair dealing, which even from a money point of view are seen to pay. Let no retailer get discouraged because trade increases but slowly. Everything valuable costs effort and time, and the result is worth all it costs. A fine reputato a merchant and brings too, its pecuniary rewards.

The secret of success is two-fold -first, a foundation of good qualities upon which a good reputation can be built, and second, the using of all legitimate and persistent means to extend the knowledge of such good qualities as far as pos-

In one of our New England towns one small boy met another by the roadside whom he saw eating something taken from his pock-et. The following was the conversation: "What yer eatin'?"
"Plums." "Where d'yer git 'em?" "Down here." "Where, off'm Smith's tree?" "No, picked 'em up off'm er ground." "Did yer ask him 'f yer might have 'm?" "Didn't this time, but I did th' other time." "Don't yer know it's stealin'?" "No." "Well, 'tis. If yer don't ask 'im every time it's just the same as stealin'." (After short pause) "Gim'me one." PARENTS CRIMINALLY LIABLE. More than half of all deaths occur before six years of age. An army of in-nocent, lovely children are swept needlessly away each year. Parents are criminally responsible for this. The death rate of children in England is less than half this. Acker's English Raby Soother has done more to bring this about than all other causes combined. You cannot afford to be without it.
