HARRISON'S INAUGURAL.
THE RAIN POURED IN TORRENTS.
 A Crowd of Over Half a Million in Washington.

A Fall Account of The Entire Proceedings.

Special to THE ASTORIAN.]
WASHINGTON, Mar. 4.—With a simple and solemn ceremony in the presence of all the wisdom and authority embodied in the coordinate branches of the government and surrounded by all the representatives of all the great nations of the globe, Benjamin Harrison was to-day inducted into the highest office within the gift of the American people.

Never was such a crowd seen in Washington before. Its numbers are estimated at half a million strangers who camped in the city last night, filling every inch of hotel and boarding house accommodations and drawing to the full limit on private hospitality. Even then many were forced to sleep on the floors, and some on billiard tables. Even the welcome recess of an occasional bath tub was not despised.

The inaugural procession was headed by Gen. James A. Beaver, of Pennsylvania, with Daniel Hastings, chief of staff, and aides. Then came the presidential party in carriages, with the survivors of the Seventieth Regiment of Indiana volunteers as an escort. Following these came the United States troops, infantry, cavalry, artillery and naval detachments, including marines, seamen and signal corps, the representatives from militia organizations of various states, including company "A," Fifth Regiment, of California, then the Grand Army of the Republic Posts, the Republican clubs and campaign organizations from all parts of the country, including the national committee of notification and the Denver cowboys.

HARRISON INAUGURATED.
WASHINGTON, March 4.—President Harrison, accompanied by the inauguration committee, was taken, in a close carriage drawn by four gray horses, to the White house at about half past ten o'clock. The rain was pouring down in torrents and drove many off the streets and made sorry work of the process decorations.

Arriving at the White house, Harrison was received by Cleveland and the cabinet in the blue parlor, where they were soon joined by Morton. At eleven o'clock Cleveland, Harrison and Morton took the carriages for the capitol. The first carriage, an open landau, contained Cleveland, Harrison, Hoar and Cockrell. The second contained Morton and senator Cullom. Mrs. Cleveland witnessed the departure from a window. Then the carriages moved out and with the Indiana veterans forming a guard of honor, one section before and one behind, marched to Pennsylvania avenue, and took their assigned places in the line of march to the capitol in mingled torrents of rain and applause.

IN THE SENATE CHAMBER.
WASHINGTON, March 4.—The doors of the senate reopened at 2:50. The conference report on the sundry civil bills having been agreed to, doors were closed and the senate took a recess till 9:30. The senate chamber was metamorphosed during the recess which ended at 9:30. Seats were reserved on the floor for Cleveland, Harrison, Morton, ex-President Hayes, ex-Vice President Hamlin, state governors, diplomatic corps, members of the supreme court, etc.

WRATHY REPRESENTATIVES.
 The galleries were rapidly filling at a quarter before eleven when word came that the house of representatives was excited over the refusal of the senate employes to admit the representatives' families to the gallery on forged tickets, which had been issued and sold for from $25 to $50.

The house passed a resolution directing the sergeant-at-arms to force a passage to the galleries, as it does not appear that fraudulent tickets were issued, though doubtless genuine ones were sold. When the house resolution was presented in the senate, Edmunds, of Vermont, adroitly settled the trouble by giving acquiescence in the resolution, with the proviso that the president of the senate might prescribe all requisite regulations respecting the identity of the ticket holders; this was agreed to.

Hannibal Hamlin, the venerable ex-vice president, was escorted to a seat at the right of president pro tem, Ingalls. As he moved across the chamber he was greeted by generous clapping of hands, the first demonstration of the day.

Blaine came in at this moment by a rear door and modestly took an obscure seat, but he could not escape discovery. A ripple of applause ran over the chamber. This increased as senator Hale went down to escort him to a more prominent seat.

General John C. Fremont shortly preceded the entrance of General W. T. Sherman and Major General Schofield. Then came the diplomatic corps in gorgeous court uniforms in striking contrast with the plain civilian dress of the American officials.

At two minutes before noon Cleveland and the cabinet entered and took seats assigned them. Then Harrison on the arm of Senator Hoar appeared at the door, walked to a seat at Cleveland's right, the audience rising. The same ceremony was repeated with Morton. Before taking his seat the latter was sworn in by Ingalls. At 11:59 president pro tem Ingalls rose and closed the fiftieth congress, then Vice President Morton called the senate of the fifty-first congress to order in special session. After swearing in the members the vice president announced without further preliminaries the senate would proceed to the platform at the east front of the capitol to witness and participate in the ceremonies of inaugurating the president-elect.

The procession moved in the following order: Marshal Wright of the supreme court, Marshal Wilson of the District of Columbia, ex-Vice President Hamlin, the supreme court, sergeant at arms, Canady, Senator Cockrell, committee of arrangements, President Cleveland, President-elect Harrison, Vice President Morton and Secretary McCook, members of the senate, diplomatic corps, heads of departments, General Sherman, General Schofield, and staff, Admiral Porter, some of representatives and members elect, governors of states and others admitted to the floor of the senate.

A minute later, Harrison was reading his inaugural address after which Chief Justice Fuller, of the supreme court administered to him the oath of office, and Benjamin Harrison of Indiana, was president of the United States.

The Lawyer Excused Him.
 The Wilcox-Murray case, on trial during the week last passed, absorbed a great deal of attention and was not devoid of humor. Among the citizens who were summoned as jurymen was one from Albina, and when his qualifications were inquired into the following colloquy ensued between the lawyer and the citizen: Q.—Are you married? Ans.—Yes sir. Q.—How long have you been married? Ans.—Six years. Q.—Who is your family physician? Ans.—Mrs. Dr. Murray. Q.—Have you any children? Ans.—No sir. The lawyer—You are excused.—Mercury.
