The life insurance companies, and the mutual assessment companies, and the beneficial organizations are considerably interested in the Johnstown disaster. The result will be financially important to many companies, for, of course, a large percentage of the 12,000 killed had policies and claims.

Mention was made in THE ASTORIAN last winter of a suit brought by Norton Bros. of Chicago against the Jensen Cannelling company, of Chicago and C. W. Fulton went on to the case. A contract has been let by the O. R. & N. Co. to Kilpatrick Bros. & Collins for the building of twenty-six miles of road from Rockford to Spokane Falls, and work has been ordered to begin at once. The construction of this road will give the O. R. & N. Co. a direct line from Portland to Spokane Falls, and is an invasion of the territory of the Northern Pacific. It is an offset to the lines lately run through the territory of the O. R. & N. Co. by the Northern Pacific. The work of laying the track on the O. R. & N. Co.'s line across the Cosur d'Alene reservation will be begun as soon as twenty miles of track from Winona through Pleasant valley to Salt junction is completed. The O. R. & N. Co. seems determined to make a vigorous fight against the encroachments of the Northern Pacific, and will not wait for the great fight for the supremacy between Henry Villard and Elijah Smith, which is to come off at the Oregon & Transcontinental company election on the 17th.

SHORT STOPS.

"The Base of Grades."

There is always considerable difficulty about what "the established grade" is, whenever city street improvement is made. At present there is a discussion as to the proper grade on Second street.

Ordinance No. 17, passed in the year eighteen hundred and several, says:

The low water line, which is fourteen and ninety-eight hundredths feet (14.98) below the stone water table at the northeast corner of the Astoria custom house is hereby established as the base of grades for the streets of the Town.

There is a grade mark or monument in the court house yard, placed two years ago by the U. S. engineers, and that, it appears, makes the grade one foot and eight-tenths lower.

There is a little uncertainty and a little dissatisfaction regarding the aforesaid, though it would appear from the record that the ordinance quoted is about as near being definite as anything regarding this much mixed matter.

There has been so much monkeying with the grades of the streets that a good many who would like to build are afraid to put $20 gold pieces into residences, etc., lest they might find the street way up or way down, about the time they had the aforesaid castles in Spain erected. Hence these steers.

A Pleasant Affair.

Last evening immediately after the weekly drill of company "H," O. N. G., Capt. Will A. Sherman announced to the company that this being the twenty-sixth anniversary of his birth he extended them an invitation to go to Rucker's restaurant and partake of refreshments, which they all did. And after doing justice to the viands set before them returned to the meeting room of the company where Capt. Sherman presented them with a life size bromide photograph of himself dressed in full regimental uniform. The picture is beautifully framed and will be much prized by the company. Speeches were made by the members wishing their commanding officer many happy returns of his birthday and on retiring giving him three hearty cheers.

Notice.

People on streets that are being improved will save money by having their pipes raised to the grade.

JUST WANTED TO KNOW.

And Willing to be Rapidly Informed.

Time, fifteen minutes after arrival of San Francisco steamer: scene, Astorian office: dramatic personae, two elderly females, one young do, one old man, one heavy walking gent, one juvenile performer.

Enter, the troupe.

"What is the size of this place how far is it from San Francisco what is its latitude and longitude what is that piece of wood on the wall did it come from here what is the teredo well I want to know and did that really get eaten up that way is that Washington territory across the river do you belong to the office?"

"No ma'am, the office belongs to me, that is Washington territory across the river: that wood got eaten up by the teredo just that way; it didn't come from here it came from the Sound: it is a piece of the stern post of the steamer Quicksstep: the teredo is a marine worm that bores timber: the latitude of Astoria is about 46° 15' north: longitude about 124° 4' W: it is 555 miles from San Francisco: it has 6,000 people."

Then she said "Oh!"

Old man, loquitor.

"Where is the site of the Astor fort what were those boats catching we saw what are all those poles sticking up out of the water do you raise wheat here how many newspapers have you how long are you here how much good timber around here do you have much rain what nationality is your people is there much game here 'is this fresh or salt water?"

"Brackish at flood tide: plenty; Scandinavian Russian German, English, Irish, Italian, Greek, all American: large amount rain: immense quantities good timber: eight years: seven: no sir: fish traps: salmon: that brick residence east of here."

The old man, having fired, fell back. Young lady in centre of stage.

"How funny the streets look we are from Bawston my paw and my maw and my brother and this young gentleman Mr. Boway?"

Mr. Boway jerks his head forward: Miss Bawston continued:

"Do many people get drowned here maw just look at that man going past why you have street cars haven't you what is that funny noise I don't think this is a prohibition town do you work on this paper I have a friend in Bawston who works on a morning paper his wife never knows what time he's coming home to supper they board seems to me you have nothing but water around here will we have time to go up on one of those hills is that clock right?"

"Yes, miss."

Then the writer grabs his hat and flees to Scotty Johnson's to see if the Solide has finished loading for Iquiqui, and Mr. Boway and the kid tackle Selig.

SOME PERTINENT REMARKS.

Present Needs of The Fire Department.

The condition of the apparatus of the Astoria fire department is not in all respects satisfactory.

THE ASTORIAN is no alarmist, and has no desire to deal in sensations, but matters regarding fire extinguishing facilities need overhauling.

On such a day as yesterday, with a wind blowing strong from the west, a fire if it once got headway would sweep the city, and those of us who were able to get out of the way would be in as bad a fix as the Johnstown survivors; and folks in London and Oshkosh and Kalamazoo and Chicago and Pittsburg would be sending money and misfit pants to the Astoria sufferers.

The first thing needful is one thousand feet of new rubber hose. There is now but 2,000 feet effective hose in the department. Talking about hose, THE ASTORIAN suggests that it isn't economy to pay $1 and $1.15 a foot for hose when San Francisco councilmen can get it, with three years guarantee for 87 1/2 cents a foot. A dollar is just as good in Astoria as in San Francisco. THE ASTORIAN respectfully suggests to the council that a thousand feet of best quality rubber hose at lowest ruling rates is a necessary adjunct of the department.

Both engines need a little looking after and overhauling. Alert H. & L. need a new truck. They can "get along" with what they have, but economy suggests a first class state of efficiency right through.

There are plenty of firemen, and good ones. Half dozen cool men working under intelligent orders are better than a mob of excited people, but when a fire breaks out time is worth $25,000 a second, and when the engines are stationed two things are necessary—that both engines shall sustain steam power enough to pump continuously and that the hose will carry water to the nozzle without bursting.

At present these two essentials are not matters of actual assurance in our fire department.

A Visitor From The Sucker State.

Mr. Gottshall, the editor of the Waterloo Advocate is in the city taking notes and will print his impression of Astoria. He's been looking around considerable. He is from southern Illinois.—The first settlements of Illinois were made in the southern portion of that state. The land was new and rich, and yielded abundantly with but little cultivation. But there were no means of transportation, or markets, and money was scarce and hard to get, an old-fashioned picaresque looking as big as the bottom of a half-bushel, and was carefully hoarded to meet some contingency. As a result of this state of things all the surplus population regularly every spring took up their line of march to the Galena lead mines, where they worked during the summer, and as regularly every fall took up their line of march for their homes in the southern part of the state. This being the habit of that numerous family of fish called suckers, which then, as now, ascended the streams in the spring and descended in the fall, the bands of Illinois settlers fluctuating between their homes and the mines soon became known as suckers, and later on the name was generally applied, and Illinois became known as the Sucker state, and her people as suckers. But Mr. Gottshall is no sucker.

William Eckhoff may understand the saloon business, but when he leaves $20 gold pieces lying on the floor of his place to be admired by his patrons, with only a half-inch deal door to protect them at night, he proves that he is but a poor judge of human nature.

On last Saturday Mr. Eckhoff opened the Silver Dollar saloon, on the corner of Halleck and Sansome streets. In the fitting up of the place he followed the lines of a noted resort in New York, but on a smaller scale. It was a novelty on the coast and crowds surged to examine the place.

The saloon was floored with small square tiles, black and white alternating, and in each black tile, except the center one, a silver dollar was imbedded. The center tile was ornamented by a new $20 gold piece.

Business was rushing on Monday, and Mr. Eckhoff was congratulating himself on the spending of $600 in a coin floor if it was to be the means of bringing in a fortune. He was extremely proud of his achievement, but when he came down to business on Tuesday his nervous system received a severe shock. On reaching the interior of his saloon he found that the $20 gold piece was gone and with it many of the silver coins. Several boxes of cigars, a little whiskey, a few bartenders' coats and mixing utensils were also missing. Eckhoff says that the outfit was enough to start business on. The thieves have not been apprehended.—S. F. Chronicle.
