She Killed the Deer.

A long-range globe-sighted rifle in the hands of a marksman can be made to run up a score of bullseyes down a firing range, but will it in the tim-ber do better work on deer than an old bored out musket loaded with nine buckshot? The size of your bag of game depends a great deal on the knowledge of the firearms you are used to. An estimable lady was re-cently deeply interested in getting out the family washing. She had sheets and tablecloths out drying, when to her horror, she saw the line go down and her clothing trampled in the dirt. A large buck, caught by the antlers, was the cause of the trouble. There was not a man within frontile. There was not a man within five miles of her—they had all gone to a neighbor's for the day. She screamed, and the deer, the more he plunged the tighter he got wound and the louder she yelled. Something had to be done, and done at once. She had a fine gun in the house loaded, but she would not approach it as firearms were her special dread. Among her many possessions she had a large pair of tongs—fire tongs— that she had brought over with her. She thoroughly understood this fire-arm, and with all her housewifely inarm, and with all her housewhely in-stincts outraged, grabbed them and sailed in. She had her clothing slightly torn, but within five minutes they had venison; she literally pounded the buck's skull to a jelly, after which she sat down and had a good cry. It all depends on what you
