Sheep in the Cascades. A gentleman who arrived from eastern Oregon says the Albany Herald, coming by the Lebanon route, states that there are now over one million head of sheep being pastured between Fish Lake and the Deschutes River.

The best range of eastern Oregon is being rapidly diminished, forcing the sheep owners to seek pastures in the Cascade mountains. This latter movement is not very acceptable to the hunters who rusticate every fall up the Santiam, as the sheep frighten the deer back into the mountains beyond their reach.
