Insur-ance distributes the burden and partially protects the individual, but the people are made poorer.

William Chandler, of Waynesboro, Ga. says that he saw a party of twelve men, living at and around old Ringgold, go fishing, each one carrying with him fishing tackle in the shape of a sledge hammer. They would strike the ledges of rock covered in the water, and the strong concussion from the heavy concussion from the heavy blows would stun the fish, and enable the fishermen to gather them in.

He sat at his door at noonday, lonely and glum and sad; the flies were buzzing and him, led by a "blue-winged gad." Not a customer darkened his portal, not a sign of business was there; but the flies kept on buzzing about the sad man's hair. At last in despair he shouted: "Great Scott! I'm covered with flies;" and the zephyr that toyed with his whiskers, whispered: "Why don't you advertise?"

TWO OF THE THINGS.

That Are Very Difficult To Understand.

Why some people at a theatrical per-formance whoop and clap and vocifer-ously demand the appearance of an ac-tor or actress between acts. Could any-thing be more incongruous or absurd, the other night when Miss Margaret Mather was going through the rotion

Her vocal velvet tones had just been hushed in simulated death; she had fallen on the sofa, bounced to the floor, and lay there in all her loveliness, playing dead, and playing it well.

The Columbia river is more of a Washington territory river than it is an Oregon river. It flows through Washington for over a thousand miles, bisects it; then for five hundred miles more it forms the southern boundary of that great commonwealth, which for so vast a distance has so intimate a connection and interest with the greatest river of the west. It does seem as if Washington should look upon the Columbia river as its river, and take pride in the interest. ing: in wrappers ready for mailing: send one home: it beats a dozen letters.

But the press loses no opportunity to not only refuse to aid in the effort of having it improved, but plays the part of a petty obstructionist in holding back those in Oregon was realized the importhose in Oregon who realize the impor-tance of this great artery of commerce. Of course the Sound is inimical to the Of course the Sound is infinical to the river's improvement, but why the eastern Washington press should so constantly oppose it, passeth all understanding.

COLUMBIA RIVER EXPORTS.

About $17,000,000 In Thirteen Month

From August 1st 1888, to August 24th, 1889, there went across the Columbia river entrance, 2,686,472 centals wheat, worth $3,775,759; 419,202 bbls. flour, worth $1,669,459; 181,251 cases salmon, worth $1,234,523. Thus there sailed, foreign. worth $1,234,525. Thus there sailed, foreign, direct, by sail, from the Columbia, during the last thirteen months, reckoning from August 1st 1888, to this morning, and including only flour, wheat and salmon, aggregating in value, $6,679,741.

The exact value of the foreign and do-mestic lumber shipments is not immedi-ately procurable, but will aggregate half million dollars a minon dollars.

The value of the domestic exports for the same time aggregates $9,761,749.

This gives a grand total of $16,941,490.

For the corresponding period of '87-88, the aggregate was $14,789,879.

But it destroyed the illusion, it jarred on the imagination. Imagination is everything in a theater, and to break rudely in on the misse en scene, to displicate the beautiful tenor of the plot by the suiden reappearance in beauteous life of the one who had just gene through with a death scene supposed to terminate fatally, was to tear away the charm of the play, and unnecessarily emphasize the fact that it was only a play.

THE SIZE FOR THE NAVY YARD

as Previously Stated In "The Asiorian."

Dispatches from Washington note the reported selection of Orchard Point or Port Orchard as the site for the proposed naval station on this coast, as stated in these columns last May when Captain Mahon, Commander Chester and Lieutenant Commander Stockton, comprising the locating board, arrived here after they had cruised all along the coasts of Washington and Oregon, in the lighthouse steamer Manzanita. It was understood then that they agreed. But that they should have agreed upon Port Orchard is a surprise to those familiar with that place, and the approaches both by sea and land.

Port Orchard is described as follows

Sea and land.

Port Orchard is described as follows by an offleial of the coast survey, who has often been in that locality: The charts show it to be an inlet nearly ten miles long, on the shore of the sound, opposite Seattle. It is a long ways from the ocean. It is difficult of access, and is not easily defensible. Behind its harbors, not ten miles to the westward Every paper in the northwest at present has something to say about the coming convention of the northwestern firemen's association, and the tournament at Tacoma next month, and a good many teams are organized in various places to have a go at the $4,200 in prizes offered at the tournament.

The yard which is to be established is to meet half way the improvements in Great Britain's navy yard at Esquimalt, and will be the largest and finest in the country. It will be equipped with the fullest plant for ship-building and repairing, and will, it is said, include extensive furnaces and forges for steel and iron works, and it is a matter of general congratulation that a naval yard is to be established somewhere on this northwest coast as it will be of mutual aid and benefit. The first was in the case of a boy a year and a half old. His face and body were in a terrible condition, the former being completily covered with sores. I took him to the Massena Sulphur Springs, but he did not improve any. I was then advised to try the Curicura Resources, which I did. He took one and one half bottles of Curicura Resources, when his skin was as smooth could be, and is to day. I used the Curicura on his sores and the Curicura sor in washing him. He is now five years of age, and all right. The other case was a disease of the scalp, which was cured by washing with the Curicura Sore and rubbing in the Curicura, one hottle of Curicura Resources ful in every case where I have advised the use of them. It is surprising how rapidly a child will improve under their treatment. I recommend them for any disease of the skin as being the best in the world.
