Hoodoos.

A Chicago lawyer has explained to a Chicago court that a hoodoo is something which pursues a man with misfortune, much in the manner that a wheelbarrow makes its haunting presence known for a weary while to the unfortunate person who has stumbled over it in the dark. This is not a happy illustration. To stumble over a wheelbarrow is doubtless, per-plexing, painful, maddening. But plexing, painful, maddening. But there is nothing weird, uncanny, or baleful about such an experience. It is simply a piece of plain unvarnished misfortune, which can be explained by the laws of gravity. On the one hand, a hoodoo is something which shatters natural laws in order to work harm.

A man who has been hoodooed finds that all the forces of nature are in active conspiracy against him. he goes out to borrow money his pocket will be picked and none of his friends will lend him a cent. If he goes on a journey the railroad train will run off the track. If he rides on cable car he will get stuck in the tunnel. In a word, he is hoodooed. Some people would call the outward manifestation of a hoodoo mere bad luck. But the adept in hoodoos can observe an important distinction between the too. The spell of the hoodoo must be broken by an incan-tation, while bad luck will simply wear itself out. There are two ex-cellent preventives for hoodoos. One is to get a mascot and the other is to decline to be a hoodoo.

"Here, my dear," she said, bringing ont a decanter and glass as they were leaving for the theater: "take one good, long, long drink." "What for?" he gasped. "Because I don't like you running out between the acts."—
