 THE WEEKLY ASTORIAN is ten pages this morning. Send a copy home.
 The schooner John G. North sailed yesterday, lumber laden, for San Francisco.
 The O. R. & N. Co. has chartered the steamer Labor to go on the Puget sound route with the Michigan and Idaho.
 The British bark Lady Elizabeth, G. C. Karon, master, 29 days from San Francisco, in ballast arrived last evening.
 The Manzanita is being put in ship shape again. It is expected she will be ready for business again by Monday.
 Yesterday morning a fifty yard foot race for $5 a side took place between Ed. Ohler and Chas. Daval, and was won by Ohler.
 The Seaside is pretty well deserted now; there is a large party enjoying life at Elk creek, in this, the pleasantest season of the year.
 The Albatross coaled at Kinney's dock yesterday. A large number of Astorians have visited the vessel. She will probably go south to day.
 The Oregon arrived from San Francisco yesterday thirty hours behind time, caused by heavy thick fogs. She brought 35 tons freight for this port.
 Andrew Carlson, the sentenced convict who broke jail at Oysterville a week ago, was heard from near Ilwaco last Wednesday. He will probably be captured before long.
 Messrs. Robb and Parker yesterday sold the following property in block 11, East Astoria: H. C. Lord two lots, M. J. Richards, two lots, Wm. Richards, Maud Guipon, one lot.
 J. C. Epperley came up from the seaside yesterday, where he has been in charge of the house during the season. He laments the loss of a valuable dog just before starting yesterday, the poor brute getting under the wheel, which broke its leg.
 Some ghouls who disgrace the form of humanity recently desecrated the vault in the hillside cemetery in which lie the remains of Judge Elliott's sister, and her husband, by turning over the vault and breaking open one of the metallic coffins, for what purpose is unknown.
 Mrs. Dunway is going to canvass the new state of Washington in favor of the article providing for woman suffrage, which will be voted on separately. She may find some new recruits, but a good many of her old time adherents have changed their views and will oppose the measure.
 Sheriff Kelley, of Multnomah county is an economical man. He declines to take down the gallows which Chen Gong was recently executed, saying that "it may be wanted again this fall," and it doesn't pay to build another so soon, when the old one would do just as well. This is a gentle hint to Sandy Olds.
 An insurance agent was in town yesterday, and paid the executor of the estate of F. R. Coggeshall $5,000 insurance, which the deceased gentleman had upon his life. The agent furnished the Astoria office to get all the details of the sad occurrence and made a verified copy of the report as published at the time.
 The Lady Elizabeth, which arrived in yesterday afternoon, had a very unusual flag, one representing three legs. The ship is evidently owned, operated, or officered by Manxmen, or natives of the Isle of Man, for that is the Manx flag. It isn't allowed to enter an English port with that flag similarly displayed, but this is a different country, and a man can do as he pleases, if he doesn't interfere with another man's right to do as he pleases.
 At the close of the first week of the school term in district No. One, last evening, there were 310 pupils enrolled: in Prof. Pratt's room, 18; in Miss Radollett's room, 25; in Miss McCormick's room, 40; in Miss Powell's room, 50; in Miss Leving's room, 40; in Miss Carnahan's room, 50; in Mrs. Busey's room, 87. In the last room but half day sessions are held, on account of the large number: that is half attend in the morning and half in the afternoon.
 Yesterday afternoon a little boy belonging to Mrs. Burday, the dressmaker, fell overboard from the sidewalk between Dr. Fulton's office and the salvation army barracks. Nobody saw the child go overboard but Mrs. F. H. Surprenant, who luckily happened to be passing at the time. She saw the feet and dress of the child sticking out of the water. She immediately called for assistance and the child was rescued more dead than alive. "It was brought to by Dr. Fulton. It was a very narrow escape.
 Reference to our dispatches shows that THE DAILY ASTORIAN of April 14th, 1889 was right when it stated that Capt. Casey, of the fiery Cross and Capt. Smith, of the Hornby Castle had made a $500 wager on which ship should arrive home first. The statement was derided, but it was true just the same. The two vessels sailed for Queenstown, April 16th, and the fiery Cross has won the race. That ship has a record of 104 days from Queenstown to Astoria, and the Hornby Castle a record of 56 days from Liverpool to Sydney, N. S. W.

believe. J. H. Johansen starts for the scene of the wreck this morning in the interest of D. Morgan, Hugh Murray, and the Aberdeen Packing Co., who had about 4,500 cases salmon aboard the vessel.
 "W-h-l-o-o-o-e-e-e!" ka goll!" said a Chinaman yesterday on coming into the Astorian office and catching sight of the Chinese pheasant on the reporter's desk. And going over to it he patted the bird in an ecstasy of delight as one who met an old acquaintance. "You savvy him, John?" he was asked. "Oh, yes," he said, "me boup savvy him. I see him often in my country. We call them ka goll." And he went on to tell that they valued those birds for their tails; that they cut off their long tails for ornaments. "How do the birds feel about it?" was asked. "Oh," said John, "they don't care. The tails grow out again as long as ever. Sometimes we catches same bird, cut tail off two, three times."
 While at Trullinger's logging camp last Thursday, four ponderous tanks would their snake like way along the gressed skid road, drawn by patient oxen. The massive lengths looked immovable, and when the eight yoke of oxen halted it looked as if a locomotive hitched to those stupendously heavy trunks couldn't budge them again. But the driver made a few remarks to the animals, and presently they lumped themselves, then stretched out, and so moved the procession. The writer thought as he saw the tremendous tanks go by, making the ground tremble as they passed, that whether it is men building up a city, or oxen pulling logs, a good deal of wonderful result can be brought about by "pulling together."

THE AMERICAN FLAG
 Will Float From Federal Buildings.
 And It Should Float From Many Others.
 Forever float that standard sheet, Where breathes the foe but falls before us, With Freedom's soul beneath our feet.
 And Freedom's banner streaming o'er us
 The newspaper idea to hoist the stars and stripes upon every federal building in the nation has triumphed. Had not a most extraordinary amount of business occupied the time of secretary of buildings, an order would have been issued last Monday directing collectors, postmasters and custodians of government edifices throughout the country to fly the old flag during the hours of business. Such an edict will probably be promulgated next Monday. Secretary Windom says.
 "I have reached a decision in the matter, and have concluded to order the flags up. Investigation warrants me in doing so. Not only is the custom a patriotic one, but I find on consulting the treasury regulations that a rule exists requiring the stars and stripes to float daily from the various buildings. I have been so overburdened with business recently that I have had no opportunity to promulgate the formal order. If I can possibly get it on Monday it will be prepared."
 "As you are aware, the old flag is daily flung to the breeze from the buildings here, and I see no reason why, especially since the regulations require it, that it should not be hoisted from every structure owned by the United States. The press is entitled to great credit for its persistent and patriotic crusade, and I only regret that I have been unable before to afford the attention to it that it deserves."
 Assistant secretary Batcheller, who won his spurs fighting for the stars and stripes, expressed himself extremely delighted at the order about to be announced. "The secretary as well as myself has all along been in favor of the idea," said he. "Not only the government buildings, but every state and municipal structure should have a flag, and it should be hoisted up daily. The custom I see is becoming exceedingly popular among the schools. Every building in which the young idea is taught how to shoot, should sport a star-spangled banner. It teaches a lesson of liberty, of patriotism, of devotion to country, as no other emblem can. The press has my heartiest congratulations upon the success it has achieved."
SPEED OF FISHES.
 The Slow and the Fast Water Dwellers.
 The speed of fishes is almost an unknown quantity, being, as the professor says, very difficult to measure. "If you could get a fish," said the professor, "and put him in a tank of water 1,000 feet long and start him at one end and make him swim to the other without stopping, the information could be easily obtained; but fish are unintelligent and they won't do this. Estimates of the speed of fish, consequently, are only approximated, and are more or less founded on guessing. You can tell, however, at a glance, whether a fish is built for speed or not. A fast fish looks trim and pointed like a racht. Its body is conical shaped, and its fins fit down close to its body, like a knife blade into its handle. Fish with large heads, bigger than their bodies, and with short, stubby fins, are built for slow motion."
 "What are the fastest fishes?"
 "The predatory fish, those which live on prey, are the fastest swimmers. The food fishes are generally among the slowest, and consequently easily captured. Their loss is recompensed, however, by the natural law which makes them very prolific in reproduction. Dolphins have been known to swim around an ocean steamer at a rate of speed to say that their speed is twenty miles an hour, but it may be twice as much. The bonito is a fast swimming fish. Just what its speed is I do not know. The head of the good fish is very large, twenty times as big as its body. It moves about very lightly, and swims at the bottom of the ocean. The Spanish mackerel is one of the fastest of the food fishes. Its body is cone shaped and as smooth as burnished metal. Its speed is as matchless as the dolphin, and in motion it cuts the water like a yacht."
 A Good Wild Cat Story.
 About the best wild cat story we have heard for some time was told by J. C. Trullinger, coming back from his logging camp in the mountains. "I have," said he, "a man working for me, who some time ago worked for Jack Miller, at Smith's Point. One evening the man saw a wild cat and sprang for his gun. When he came out the wild cat had got up a tree, a bare trunk, and was clinging there. The man thought, 'now I'll climb up, catch the cat by the hind feet, slide down and as I strike the ground I'll let go at a whirl and dash his head against the tree.'
 "I don't know what the cat thought, but anyhow the man climbed up the tree and just as he grabbed the cat by the hind legs, it got all holes, swung around and buried its teeth in his shoulder."
 "He slid down with the wild cat a tearing away at him, and then began a rough and tumble fight between him and the cat. At last, after the varmint and pretty near tore all the clothes off the man and chawed up his shoulder and arm, he managed to get his hands around its throat and choked it to death."
 "About two weeks after he was able to sit up in bed and get the bandages of his arm, but the next time he tackled a wild cat it won't be up a tree."

HE BELIEVES IN PROTECTION NOW.
 At Least So Far As Labor is Concerned.
 "I am going to the Sacramento river," said a fisherman at the close of the season on the river about five weeks ago. "I will get ninety cents for salmon there."
 A good many Columbia river fishermen started for the Sacramento at the same time, with the same expectation.
 Several of them returned on the Oregon yesterday.
 "Well, how did you make it?" asked an Astorian reporter of one of those who returned. "We didn't make it at all," was the answer. "I tell you I am a convert to the doctrine of protection; of protection to labor at least."
 "When we went down to the Sacramento this time the two canneries, one at Black Diamond, one at Benicia, were willing enough at first to take us Columbia river fishermen. The first day we were to get four cents a pound; the second day, fifty cents apiece; the third day twenty-five cents apiece; the fourth day we got soup; we were boycotted. The cannery didn't want us, the Sacramento fishermen didn't want us. The fish came in in great numbers—200 to the boat; there was nothing for us to do."
 "The fishermen down there kicked; said we had no business there; went to the cannery; the cannery stood in with them. Now I believe when those fellows come up here next spring we ought to give them a dose of their own medicine. I think protection is a good thing; we ought to have fewer boats on the Columbia next season, and give the preference to residents of Oregon."
 "Weak and weary" describes the condition of many people debilitated by the warm weather, by disease or overwork. Hood's Sarsaparilla is just the medicine needed to build up and strengthen the body, purify and quicken the sluggish blood, and restore the lost appetite.

 The Road Passes Through a Fine Country.
 District attorney H. H. Hewitt returned yesterday from Tillamook, where he has been attending the regular term circuit court held there by Judge Boise.
 In going down he passed over the surveyed line of the Albany and Astoria railway for a considerable distance. The road, which is a comparatively level country, which Mr. Hewitt says is one of the richest portions of Oregon. The pass through the coast range of mountains is hardly entitled to the name of a mountain pass, it is so low, being about 300 feet above the altitude of Albany. The surveyors are now at work on Three Rivers, which is 10 miles beyond the toll-gate on Fuqua's toll road, and is 15 miles beyond Litchfield's store on the Grand Ronde Indian reservation. The people along the route of the proposed road are most favorably inclined toward the project, and no trouble will be encountered in securing the right of way. Land along the route has already advanced perceptibly in consequence of the railroad work.—Astoria Herald, 5.

 Clang, clang, clang, went the fire alarm bell at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. A thousand people rushed into the street. "Where's the fire?" A brisk breeze from the west lent interest to the inquiry.
 "The Astoria Iron works is on fire," was the cry. In an incredibly short time the department was on the ground and at work. Rescues on Kinney's dock, and the Amoskeag on the dock north of the works.
 Great volumes of red flame shot up from the cupola, which was full of molten metal, and from the roof adjacent.
 For a minute it looked bad for that end of town, and for any end if the wind kept on, but with a ringing cheer the boys got to work. Two inside, One on the roof, a third stream in the center, and in another minute the fire was under subjection.
 It was that minute that saved the building, and probably a great deal more.
 The Astorian has got so used, through the years, to chronicling the brilliant work of the department that it sometimes comes a little old to write of the quick work displayed, but the Astoria fire department never did much livelier or better work than at the fire yesterday afternoon.
 The loss was $650, as follows: patterns, $450; roof, $150; castings, $50.
 Supt. Fox, on the part of the company desires to express his sincere thanks to the fire department, and feels that their efforts in the saving of the building. He had two inch hose all over the building, and water was turned on as soon as the fire started in the roof, but the connections broke out.
 Later in the evening chief engineer Weeks was handed a substantial token of appreciation in the shape of a check for $150, signed "J. G. Hustler, secretary and treasurer," in grateful recognition of the services of the Astoria fire department. Weeks will divide the $150 between the three companies, giving them each $50, and on behalf of the department desires to express sincere appreciation of the liberality so generously evinced.
