RECONNOTIERING UNDER DIFFI-OULTIES.

The Recent Experience of a Survey Party in the Nehalem Country-They Were Weary and Hungry.

On Sunday morning at 5 o'clock a surveying party, consisting of William Reid, president, F. E. Habersham, chief engineer and assistant engineer Cooper, of the Astoria and South Coast railway, with another Portland gentleman and guide, left Vernonia, Columbia county, Or., in search of a new railroad pass through the headwaters of Rock creek and Deep creek to Jewell over government unsurved lands. Being assured by their guide they would cross the divide to the settlements before 7 o'clock that evening no provisions were taken. At 3:30 r. M. they had not only lost their dinner but also their way home, and rain and mists coming on, the guide could not tell where they were and no trail could be found anywhere.

They accordingly resolved to walk

They accordingly resolved to walk down Deep creek and wade through the waters of that river to the Nehalem, a distance of twenty miles. After plodding five miles through the water and falling repeatedly over head in the stream, night overtook them, and weary, wet and hungry, without provisions, they kindled a huge fire and slept the sleep of the just in the open air. Rain sleep of the just in the open air. Rain came on during the night, and in the morning, wet and discouraged, the party determined to seek their breakfast, hav-morning, wet and discouraged, the party determined to seek their breakfast, having tasted no food from the previous morning at 5,0 clock. So they wandered on over timber, fallen logs, trees and thick brush and ravines without a trail till 6 o'clock on Monday morning, Mr. Reid going first. At last they came across a tree on which was carved these words, "Congar ridge, 4th of September, 1884, B. W. C."

They were very hungry and looking for breakfast, and the first thing Mr. Reid, who was walking a head, saw which looked like eating, was a huge congar standing on a fallen tree. The congar was hungry affil was looking for his breakfast, and the question arose whether he should eat Mr. Reid or allow Mr. Ried to eat him. Knowing nothing of the doctrine of the survival of the fit. whether he should eat Mr. Reid or allow Mr. Ried to eat him. Knowing nothing of the doctrine of the survival of the fittest, the fierce brute prepared to spring on Mr. Reid, when as quick as lightning the guide, James Adams, of Vernonia, raised his Winchester and shot the cougar dead on the spot. It measured twelve feet from tip to tip. Not feeling inclined to wait until the coagar could be cooked, the party pushed on through the forest, and at length heard the welcome sound of a cow bell, and at 10 o'clock sat down to the long sought breakfast at the ranch of Ben Birkenfield, five miles from the Nehalem river, swearing that they would never undertake to cross these mountsins again without provisions. One of the party sent Mr. Birkenfield with two hounds, back to bring in the skin of the cougar, and send it to Portland as a memento of and send it to Portland as a memento o his experiences in search of a new route for the Astoria and South Coast railroad to Portland.—Oregonian, 6.
